B.C. builders face shutdown

Hydro pickets could halt work by weekend

VANCOUVER (CP) — The province's construction industry will shut down if a labor dispute at B.C. Hydro is not settled by the end of the week, the president of the B.C. council of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada said Monday.

Home builders are facing increased expenses and construction delays of up to six weeks because Office and Technical Employees Union pickets are preventing Hydro crews from hooking up natural gas and electrical services to homes under construction, said Ernie Hnatiuk.

Builders, especially those in the B.C. interior, require heat to complete home interiors. Without gas or electricity hook ups they must rent propane heaters or convert gas heaters to propane, he said.

"We estimate rental of propane equipment, additional interest payments on loans financing projects, as well as taxes, supervision costs and expenses for homeowners unable to occupy their homes are costing apartment builders $24 per unit each day the strike continues."

Builders of single family homes are paying $39 per home each day in additional overhead costs, he said.

Propane equipment supplies are running out in the Greater Vancouver area and builders in the interior are able to keep on construction schedules only by paying heavily for temporary conversion of gas furnaces to propane, Hnatiuk said.

"We anticipate by the end of this week if the B.C. Hydro problem is not resolved, many builders will find additional unrecoverable costs intolerable and they will be forced to stop work.

"While some builders will be able to recover costs by passing additional expenses on to home buyers and renters, many contract builders are committed to fixed budgets and firm possession dates."

Meanwhile, the 3,700-member union has vowed to continue picketing and shut down Sea-Bus ferry service across Burrard Inlet again today.

Monday pickets halted the two passenger ferries which run between the city's North Shore and the main downtown business section after a breakdown in contract talks.

Union negotiators had agreed to take Hydro's latest contract offer to the membership — although they said they would recommend rejection — if the company ended a lockout affecting about 60 union members.

Committee chairman Fred de Moor said the union offered to stop all picketing in about a dozen cities while a ratification vote took place.

But B.C. Hydro spokesman Ron Monk said the company rejected the trade-off because it wants the union bargaining committee to recommend acceptance of the two-year contract, similar to that already negotiated with two other unions at the government-owned utility.

46% raise for Bonner

B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner has been given a 46-per-cent pay increase, boosting his annual salary to more than $10,000 above that of Premier Bill Bennett.

The raise, approved by cabinet shortly after last Friday's shuffle, brings Bonner's salary to $70,000 a year from $48,000, compared with Bennett's $59,500. The increase dates back to Oct. 1.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, the energy minister and man responsible for Hydro until the cabinet shuffle, defended the size of the increase Monday on grounds that no Hydro chairman has received a raise in six years.

The former NDP government decided in 1973 the position of Hydro chairman was worth $48,000 and there has not been an increase since then, Hewitt said.

The 46 per cent averaged over six years becomes an annual eight-per-cent increase, which is comparable to recent settlements won by trade unions, he said.

"When you consider B.C. Hydro is one of B.C.'s top employers and has responsibilities comparable to any other major corporation, it's my personal observation he's worth far more."

He said Bonner, 59, should have a salary closer to the $85,000 a year Robbie Sherrell, president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C, receives.

Hewitt said he did not think it was bad timing to announce the increase while Hydro was in the midst of a protracted labor dispute with its office workers, members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 378.

Hewitt said he had been working on the increase for some time, and it was coincidence that the paperwork was completed in time for the new cabinet to approve it after the swearing-in ceremony Friday.

But union spokesman Fred Trotter said Bonner's increase will not sit well with the members because some of them are striking now to get a wage offer of eight per cent in each year of a proposed two-year contract.

Trotter said because of deductions and the loss of the employees' bus pass, the increase will be more like five per cent in the second year.

Opposition hydro critic Chris D'Arcy (NDP — Rossland-Trail) said the increase is a hefty one, but it brings Bonner's salary closer to that paid senior executives in other crown corporations and in private industry.

He said he expected the chairman of a corporation with annual sales of $900 million would earn more than $70,000.

B.C. Hydro ended its 1978-79 fiscal year March 31 with a profit of $48.6 million on sales of $904 million. It had assets valued at $6 billion.

Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) said he thought the government boosted Bonner's salary so that it would equal the $62,500 pension he is entitled to receive from MacMillan Bloedel.

Before moving to Hydro, Bonner had been chairman of MacMillan Bloedel, earning $120,454 a year. He has said he will not accept the pension.

Grace plays Santa

About 30,000 welfare families will get a $50 Christmas bonus this year, double last year's award.

An additional 23,000 single welfare recipients will get a bonus of $20, up from last year's $15.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Monday the increase recognizes the effects of inflation as well as marking the Year of the Child and the Family.

Mrs. McCarthy also renewed her pledge to get as many people as possible off the welfare rolls and back into the work force.

Boat flips off Ledge, man dies

One man is dead and another in hospital after a 17-foot fibreglass boat overturned off Brotchie Ledge this morning.

Name of the dead man is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Details of the incident are sketchy but a spokesman for the Canadian Armed Forces base at Esquimalt said the two men were fishing when their boat overturned shortly before 9 a.m.

The spokesman said two divers off the minesweeper Chignecto pulled one of the men from the water. The second was rescued by another pleasure craft in the area.

The Chignecto brought both men into Victoria Harbor where they were transferred by ambulance to Victoria General Hospital.

One of the men died and the other is listed in good condition recovering from exposure.

Landslide in Charlottes . . .warnings come true

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Eight landslides in a logged-over valley on the west coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands have threatened a major salmon spawning stream, says fisheries supervisor Kip Slater.

In Victoria, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said today the provincial government will investigate the report.

In March, a conflict between the federal fisheries department and the B.C. forest service over continued logging of the site resulted in the arrest of 16 loggers.

Charges laid under the Fisheries Act indicted loggers for endangering a fish habitat near Rennell Sound on Graham Island by increasing the risk of sedimentation in spawning areas.

The forests ministry argued there was no concrete proof that logging was affecting slope stability. The fisheries ministry backed down and accepted an end to logging on only a small portion of the permit.

Charges against the loggers and the logging company were dropped.

Slater said the fact that major slides came so soon after logging indicates that slope stability at Rennell Sound is much worse than anticipated.

Usually, he said, large failures do not occur until after root systems have rotted away, usually a period of three to four years.

Three of the slides are considered major, measuring up to 60 metres across and exposing bed rock in crevaces up to 15 metres deep.

Slater said a wall of mud has crossed a logging access road and moved into slash and standing timber near Riley Creek, a major pink salmon stream.

While it is not a pink salmon spawning year, Slater said that any other spawning in the creek likely has been lost due to heavy sedimentation. And he's not optimistic about future seasons.

Slope stability also has been questioned at several other proposed logging areas in Rennell Sound and fisheries officers are worried that Riley Creek could be eliminated from fish production completely.

"Now maybe the forest service will listen to us when we show them geographic surveys," Slater said. "We're not in the business of writing off salmon streams."

Jack Biickert, manager of the Prince Rupert forest region which includes the Queen Charlotte Islands, said the slope failures were the result of abnormal weather, heavy rainfall and high, almost hurricane-force winds.

Some 150 millimetres of rain (slighty more than six inches) fell on Rennell Sound in the 48 hours preceding the slide.

Biickert said forest rangers are checking damage at the site. He declined to comment on the possible effects logging might have made on the slope's stability.

Meanwhile, MP Jim Fulton (NDP-Skeena), said he will call on Fisheries Minister James McGrath to pursue the charges against QC Timber that were dropped last spring.

Pakistan and Brazil racing toward N-bomb

Times News Services

Pakistan has acquired the materials and technology to make a hydrogen bomb and hopes to test its first thermonuclear device by April, a London newspaper, quoting a high-level military source in Islamabad, says.

And in Toronto, Maclean's magazine says Brazil and Argentina — traditional adversaries — have been teaming up on atomic weapons research and says Brazil can be expected to explode a nuclear device within the next year, possibly in six months.

The London Sunday Times said that with a desert hijacking in Africa and other secret operations on two other continents, Pakistan has managed to outpace the estimates of the United States and other nuclear powers who feared they would assemble a nuclear bomb in two or three years.

The newspaper said uranium was acquired from a truck that vanished after setting out from a French mining base three months ago and was later found empty.

The newspaper said signs point to two possible test explosion sites — in the Sind Desert and in the wasteland of South Baluchistan.

Maclean's, quoting diplomatic sources of the Washington-based Council on Hemispheric Affairs, a private think tank, says scientists from both countries are getting help and encouragement from South Africa to develop nuclear muscle.

It adds that Brazil is using weapons-grade plutonium — a nuclear byproduct — from reactors built for it by West Germans in 1975 under a $10-billion contract that almost went to Canada.

The German company that built the reactors, Kraftwerke Union, is the same firm that signed a contract recently to build reactors in Argentina — a contract Canada anxiously sought.

Maclean's says Canada missed the two reactor contracts because Canadian Candu reactors are built too safely to produce the grade of plutonium needed to make weapons, whereas the West German reactors will easily produce it.

Students booby-trap U.S. embassy

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Moslem students occupying the U.S. embassy in Tehran say they have planted explosives around the embassy compound to foil an alleged U.S. plan to free the 49 American hostages still held there.

"The embassy grounds, the walls and the buildings where the hostages are held are mined or wired with explosives," the students said in a communique broadcast over the official radio.

The students, who seized the embassy on Nov. 4, said U.S. agents plan a raid in the next few days during the period of Moslem mourning commemorating the death of the prophet Mohammed's grandson.

"Do not for any reason climb the walls," the students warned the public: "There is the danger of death at any moment and at any step."

Iran's unofficial leader, the Ayatollah Khomeini said today that nothing — including United Nations action — would prevent the remaining American hostages' being put on trial as "U.S. spies" unless the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, were extradited from the U.S. and returned to Iran to face charges for humanitarian crimes.

Khomeini insisted the shah's case must be investigated in Iran because all evidence against him was in Iran and could not be sent abroad:

"There are millions of witnesses, including over 100,000 people crippled (by the shah's regime), whose transfer outside Iran to report to the court is not possible."

In New York, a team of doctors headed by Vancouver radiologist Dr. H. Joachin Burhenne of the University of British Columbia today removed the shah's remaining gallstone, but want to keep him under observation for "the next few days."

A spokesman for the shah said the former monarch hopes to return to Mexico as soon as doctors permit him, but added: "It's totally dependent on the doctors' decision."

Burhenne helped develop the special non-surgical procedure used on the shah.

Khomeini rejected any action by the UN Security Council in Iran, declaring his Islamic regime could not accept the verdict of "any council or court formed under direct influence of the United States."

In Washington, President Carter told Democratic congressional leaders today U.S. honor is at stake in Tehran and reportedly indicated the United States would not quickly forgive Iran for holding Americans captive.

97% Liberal in Que. vote

MONTREAL (CP) — Voters in D'Arcy McGee riding handed Liberal Herbert Marx a commanding victory in a provincial byelection Monday, giving him almost 97 per cent of the votes.

With all 174 polls accounted for, Parti Quebecois candidate David Levine fetched a meagre 791 votes — about half what the PQ got in the riding in the 1976 general election — against 23,313 for Marx.

It was the seventh straight byelection win for the Liberals since the PQ came to power in 1976 and a victory which was not unexpected because the Montreal riding has a tradition of voting strongly for the Grits.

Standings in the national assembly following Marx's victory: PQ, 68; Liberal, 30; Union Nationale, 9; Independent, 3.

Marx, a 47-year-old former electrical equipment salesman who teaches constitutional law at the French-language University of Montreal, succeeds Victor Goldbloom, who retained D'Arcy McGee for the Liberals in 1976 with 21,248 votes, or 67 per cent of the ballots cast.

made it clear (that) simply by releasing the hostages, the slate is not wiped clean," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnson of Louisana. "I don't think anyone around this place is being intimidated."

Iran's military has banned all air traffic over the religious city of Qom, Khomeini's headquarters, and reportedly was considering an emergency plan to mobilize all regular and irregular armed forces.

Scores of Iranian paratroopers lined up to board C130 Hercules aircraft a day after Khomeini called on his countrymen to forge together and create an army to fight the "satanic" United States.

Khomeini's spurning of UN mediation efforts came as UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim announced the 15-member Security Council would meet late today.

Waldheim said he was informed Iran's acting Foreign Minister Abol Hassan Bani-Sadr would arrive in New York Saturday, earlier than originally expected.

Waldheim told ABC News late Monday the Council would try to reach agreement on the release of the hostages and the setting up of an international commission under U.N. auspices to "investigate the shah's having violated human rights . . . and taking property of people in Iran."

In Washington, the State Department announced that "non-essential" diplomats and their families have been advised to leave their posts in 10 Moslem countries: North Yemen, Qatar, Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, Bangladesh, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain and Oman.

Washington said "voluntary drawdown" — withdrawing the members of the diplomatic community to the U.S. or other U.S. posts abroad — was not an evacuation, and was only temporary. All 10 embassies involved would remain open.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said the Canadian government regards the seizure of American hostages in Iran as an attack on Canadian rights.

Canada has condemned the Iranian hostage-taking as a violation of the Vienna convention on diplomatic rights, she said.

Meanwhile, some of the armed band of Moslem "fanatics" who invaded and occupied the Grand Mosque in Mecca a week ago still held out today in the labyrinthine catacombs of Islam's holiest shrine.

Saudi Arabian security forces, who had announced earlier that they regained complete control of the mosque, combed its ancient underground passageways in search of the last remaining Moslem militants, who the government has labelled "fanatics."

The rebel gunmen, who may have numbered up to 500, retreated to the mosque's catacombs.

Thump in time halts DC-9

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Air Canada flight to Calgary Sunday was delayed half an hour while officials off-loaded an unexpected passenger — a baggage handler who had been locked in one of the plane's baggage compartments.

Airline spokesman Harry Atterton said Monday the DC-9 was taxiing towards the runway when a stewardess heard a thumping noise coming from the compartment.

The plane returned to the terminal and the handler, identified as Paul Michaels, was released.

Atterton said the handler who makes the last visual check of the cargo compartment did not see Michaels, who apparently was behind a net barrier that is placed in a cargo hold to prevent shifting during the flight.

He said that had Michaels not managed to alert the flight crew to his predicament, he faced a one-hour flight at more than 30,000 feet in an unpressurized compartment.

"We don't think he would have died, but he certainly would have been cold," Atterton said.

Airline officials are investigating.

U.S. prices up another 1%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. cost of living rose 1 per cent in October, with prices of gasoline, home heating oil, food and other items climbing more slowly than they have in recent months, the Labor Department reported today.

The October figures brought the total increase in consumer prices during the last 12 months to 12.2 per cent.

The over-all increase in the Consumer Price Index last month — blamed mostly on sharply rising housing prices — was a shade less than September's 1.1 per cent. But it was the 10th straight month in which price increases have hovered around 1 per cent.

Rent controls to stay

Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen said Monday he favors the elimination of rent controls but the government has no plans to remove them at this time.

Nielsen said in a news release the seven-per-cent ceiling still is in effect for one-bedroom units renting for less than $300 a month, two-bedroom units renting for under $350 a month and three-bedroom units renting for less than $400 a month.

The minister also said most tenants who pay under $500 a month are able to appeal excessive rent increases on an individual basis.

He said landlords may apply to the Rent Review Commission for increases greater than seven per cent when they are forced to renegotiate their mortgages at higher interest rates.

B.C. denies uranium sales pitch

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation should apologize to the provincial government for charges that B.C.'s recent trade mission to the Orient tried to make a deal involving the export of uranium, Premier Bill Bennett said Monday.

The premier said the delegation which he headed didn't try to sell B.C. uranium to overseas customers and instead cautioned South Korea about the uranium inquiry now taking place in B.C.

Reports Friday that several Canadian mining companies have signed multi-million-dollar contracts to sell B.C. uranium to south Korea caused an uproar at the royal commission hearing.

Greenpeace announced it was withdrawing as a major participant in the inquiry. Other environmental groups said they were considering similar action.

Director Pat Moore of Greenpeace said the contracts were "in contempt of the uranium inquiry process" and "exposes the inquiry as a complete sham."

"The export contracts are estimated to be worth $300 million, but have not been approved by the federal regulatory agencies."

The firms involved are reported to be Norcen Energy Resources Ltd. and Lacana Mining Corp. of Toronto, which hope to develop a property near Kelowna, and E and B Explorations Ltd. of Calgary. They apparently have reached agreement with Korea Electric Co. for the export of about seven million pounds of uranium oxide over 11 years beginning in 1983.

20 disabled pickets back

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 20 disabled workers, some of them using canes or wearing orthopedic braces, resumed their information picketing of the Workers' Compensation Board Monday and vowed to stay there until the board takes their claims more seriously.

"Until we get satisfaction or the courts drag us out, we'll be here rain or shine," said Merril Turpin, spokesman for the United Injured and Disabled Workers' Association.

He said the association wants the board to give more consideration to their claims for compensation so they are not forced onto welfare.

A board spokesman said she was surprised the group was continuing its picketing, since a meeting two weeks ago between the workers and board chairman Adam Little had "achieved better communication between both sides."

BCDC director re-appointed

Former Social Credit MLA Newell Morrison has been re-appointed by the B.C. government as a director of the B.C. Development Corp. for three years.

He is chairman of the Crown corporation.

The provincial cabinet has also appointed Dr. H.M. Ellis, of Burnaby, and Martin Wedepohl, of Vancouver, as directors of the Science Council of B.C.

Interior plane crash kills three

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — Three persons were reported killed and a survivor is in critical condition following the crash Monday of a single-engine plane about 130 kilometres northwest here.

RCMP said the Otter aircraft went down near the British Columbia Railway line at Leo Creek.

No identities were available.

Police said the crash of the commercially-owned aircraft occurred at about 4:30 p.m. shortly after takeoff from a short private airstrip.

Prescription ban order sticks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court has denied an attempt by a Vancouver doctor banned from prescribing narcotics to obtain a temporary order lifting the ban until the matter is decided in a trial.

Mr. Justice Collier dismissed a motion by Dr. Frank Schulze in which the physician sought an interim injunction against federal Health Minister David Crombie and T. Reid McKim, director of the bureau of dangerous drugs.

Dr. Schulze informed authorities in August that he had put a patient on a morphine maintenance program to cope with her addiction and to help her live an otherwise normal life.

Morphine can only be prescribed as a pain killer, but Schulze said the woman came to him in a deep state of depression after an unsuccessful attempt to kill herself.

The bureau of dangerous drugs subsequently banned Schulze from prescribing narcotics for a year.

Paper fined $200 for straw vote

NELSON (CP) — The Daily News was fined $200 in provincial court Monday after the newspaper pleaded guilty to contravention of the B.C. Elections Act.

Prior to the May 10 provincial general election, the morning newspaper published man-on-the-street interviews with 16 Nelson-area residents asking their forecast on the election.

Hank Coleman, the Soecial Credit candidate who lost to incumbent Lorne Nicolson of the NDP in the Nelson-Creston riding, launched the action against the newspaper.

International speeder gets jail

SURREY (CP) — An 18-year-old Portland, Ore. man who led police on a wild international freeway chase through Washington state and into B.C. was sentenced to three months in jail Monday.

Allan Lloyd Wahlers pleaded guilty in provincial court to criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehcile.

He and a juvenile girl were taken into police custody Sunday when the pursuit, which began 140 kilometres south in Everett, Wash., ended on a local wharf.

The chase began when the car failed to stop for a state highway patrol radar car.

The car raced north on Highway 99 at 160 kilometres an hour and whipped through the Douglas border crossing where the pursuit was picked up by the RCMP.

RCMP cornered the speeding vehicle after it rammed into a police car and pushed it into several imported Japanese cars on the wharf.

The girl was sent home to her parents in Portland.

Recount kayoes veteran alderman

CHILLIWACK (CP) — A recount of ballots cast in the Nov. 17 municipal election here has knocked a veteran alderman off council and inserted a new face on the first amalgamated council in the new Chilliwack district.

Newcomer Geoff Clark gained over 100 votes when it was discovered a tally sheet had not been added in the original count. That put Clark into seventh place, giving him a one-year council seat.

Incumbent Jack Andrews, who had 10 more votes than Clark on election night, fell to ninth place over-all, missing election by 73 votes.

Rail service resumes Dec. 10

VANCOUVER (CP) — Service will resume Dec. 10 on the British Columbia Rail line to Fort St. John, railway spokesman Hugh Armstrong said Monday.

A rail trestle leading to a bridge over the Peace River was destroyed by fire Oct. 20 after 11 tank cars containing gasoline, butane and diesel fuel rolled off a siding on to the trestle and derailed.

Hooker curb bid renewed

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Canadian police chiefs once again have taken their case for stronger prostitution laws to the federal government — and once again the federal government has promised to consider it.

A spokesman for Federal Justice Minister Jacques Flynn said in Ottawa Monday the senator is expected to raise the issue at the Conservative caucus meeting Wednesday following a meeting with senior police officials in Ottawa last week.

Vancouver Police Chief Don Winterton, who is also president of the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs, told a news conference that police chiefs want the Criminal Code revised to allow police to fight prostitution more effectively.

A special bill to strengthen the legislation was introduced under Pierre Trudeau's Liberal government, but died on the order paper when the federal election was called in May.

A Supreme Court ruling in February, 1978, in the case of Vancouver prostitute Debra Hutt, has stymied police efforts to control prostitution which is on the increase across the country, Winterton said.

The high court ruled that soliciting must be "pressing and persistent" to be an offence and also that an automobile, including a police car, is a private rather than a public place.

The police chiefs' association wants the Criminal Code amended to specify that soliciting need not be pressing and persistent to be a crime and that an automobile is a public place, Winterton said.

Play it safe, Jack

One of the first tasks facing the new provincial labor minister, Jack Heinrich, is the diffusion of the mounting animosity between the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Workers' Compensation Board.

The heat between the WCB and labor is being generated by the International Woodworkers of America which has a list of grievences a mile long. Previously simmering on a back-burner, the dispute erupted last week when the B.C. Fed supported IWA western regional president Jack Munro's call for dramatic changes, and even went so far as to demand the resignation of the WCB chairman.

Munro and other union officials contend "that the accident prevention policies of the current administration of the WCB are to a large extent responsible for the fact that the forest industry is becoming an increasingly dangerous workplace." No graver charge could be laid against an organization whose responsibility is to improve health and safety.

Munro's brief, which was sent to the labor minister, condemns the WCB for everything from its workplace inspection to the way it handles accident claims. It states that inspections are down 20 per cent, while claims are up 18 per cent. The number of citations for safety violations in the workplace handed to employers is down 50 per cent in three years, it says.

In the final analysis the union believes the the WCB has been dancing to a tune piped by the major employers. Services to the man on the job, they say, are being curtailed to the point that risk of injury has increased 22 per cent in the past two years. And they say this is occurring because the WCB assessments (what industry pays to the board) are not increasing enough to improve safety training, inspections and injury claims.

These are very serious charges. However, they have been tempered by WCB chairman Adam Little who came out swinging in defence of his administration when challenged by similiar charges from the IWA earlier this fall.

Although assessment rates weren't up dramatically, Little said the money collected by the WCB had increased nearly 50 per cent in three years to an estimated total in 1979 of $70 million. He said that the WCB spent 50 per cent of its inspection time looking at the forest industry, the number of workers reached through safety training programs was up 25 per cent in the last two years and that penalties for health and safety violations had risen from $44,000 to $61,000.

Little showed uncharacteristic emotion in his rebuff, charging the union with making inaccurate, inflammatory allegations and turning the question of health and safety into a political football. But his main point was "the board can inspect and regulate until Hell freezes over, but until there is genuine co-operation between employers, workers and the WCB, the WCB will continue to spend a good deal of time and energy fighting bush-fires while the main, long term work of improving industrial health and safety conditions is interrupted and impeded."

Little's sentiment on co-operation cannot be faulted. But it is obvious that this dispute has gone beyond hope of resolution without investigation by a third party. It is in the political arena and the challenge must be taken up by Jack Heinrich.

Safety is as much a state of mind as it is a result of training. Minds, in this matter, are clouded. And since the rate of accidental injury on the job is increasing at about eight per cent a year, the victims could use some clear thinking.

More than a pretty face

Now that Liberal Party delegates from across Canada have been summoned to Winnipeg next March to chose a new leader, they would do well to pay attention to the party's youth movement.

The Liberal Youth Commission, which holds approximately one-third of votes to be cast at the convention, has warned leadership hopefuls to campaign on policies rather than personalities. Commission president Jean Gagnon would immensely improve the Liberal Party image if he can convince other delegates to insist on the same criteria.

At one time there were basic philosophical differences between Liberals and Conservatives. If those differences exist today, they are not obvious. Each party's approach to the country's problems and future at any particular moment depends more on pragmatism than political dogma.

If the Liberals intend to differentiate themselves from the Conservatives in the near future and give the nation a clear alternative to the Tory government, delegates must back a candidate with clearly defined policies and objectives.

Far too many people have defined the differences between the major parties solely in terms of leadership. Without a doubt, the looks and personal appeal of any leader weigh heavily in terms of voter response. But the problems facing Canada in the next few years demand that the Liberal party choose a leader with more to offer than charisma.

BARBARA McLINTOCK

The rest of the pea-patch

In assessing a cabinet shuffle, the most important questions to be asked are those concerning the qualifications and abilities of the appointees for their new positions. In general, Premier Bennett's appointments last week appear promising in these regards.

More interesting questions, however, may be asked about the political reasons for certain appointments, the motivations of the premier in his choice of new appointees, and the internal power structures and struggles that come to light in the shuffle.

Looking at Bennett's shuffle, some of these questions might be:

- Who invented the strange potpourri of ministerial responsibilities that Pat McGeer inherited? (Universities, science and communications don't seem to be naturally compatible bedmates.)

Ministers' feelings

- What happened to Bill Ritchie, the Central Fraser Valley MLA who was expected to be a shoo-in for a cabinet position?
- Why did Bennett leave one cabinet position (tourism) unfilled?
- What was the reason for the choice of Stephen Rogers as the new Vancouver MLA rather than Peter Hyndman? (A supplementary: how does Peter Hyndman feel about it?)
- Speaking of ministers' tender feelings, does Rafe Mair really believe the health portfolio is the most suitable place for him to use his talents? Since he has headed B.C. constitutional task force since its inception, why did Garde Gardom win the new intergovernmental affairs portfolio instead of Mair?
- A number of caucus members have not been too impressed with the performance of Brian Smith. All the same, he got into the cabinet. Why?
- What was the goal of having Evan Wolfe and Hugh Curtis switch jobs?
- What does it mean that Bennett did not demote a single soul from the cabinet — neither Grace McCarthy whose reputation is a little cloudy because of Lettergate at the moment, nor a couple whose reputations are a little cloudy because of lacklustre performances since their appointments?

The only man who can offer definitive answers to those questions is Bennett himself, but some educated speculation is surely possible.

PAT MCGEER

RAFE MAIR

Pat McGeer: The most likely person to have invented McGeer's portfolio of miscellany is McGeer himself. The link joining the three together is that the man is interested in them all. It appears that Bennett had to offer McGeer pretty much what he wanted for fear the former Liberal leader would even yet decide that research on whales' brains would be more interesting than politics for the next three years.

Bill Ritchie: Although Ritchie was perceived as the best rookie MLA in the House last session, the premier simply could not appoint to his cabinet a man who was under active investigation by the RCMP. Were the investigation to result in any charges, the premier would have egg all over his face.

Hence, the empty portfolio. If Ritchie is cleared within a month or so, he can become the new minister of tourism. If he isn't, Bennett will have to go shopping for somebody else.

Peter Hyndman: The appointment of Rogers is a direct putdown to Hyndman, his seatmate from Vancouver South. Ever since the 1975 election, Bennett hasn't much liked Hyndman whom he views as a little too ambitious and a little too prone to give advice where it isn't wanted. This is the first notice that Hyndman will have to serve a fairly long apprenticeship before ever making a Bill Bennett cabinet. Hyndman will not be pleased.

Rafe Mair: Mair will not be terribly happy with his assignment to the health portfolio. He'll probably do a good job, because he's the sort who will do a good job in any portfolio, but he isn't really very interested in hospital costs and the legal mess that is the government's attempt at heroin treatment legislation. He would have liked either the attorney-general's job or the new intergovernmental affairs ministry.

Gardom received the new ministry because it was a place to put him where he wouldn't have to do much administration. He has shown quite clearly in four years that administration is not his forte — diplomacy, of the sort needed for the House leader's or intergovernmental affairs job, is. Gardom would, for instance, make a hopeless health minister. Mair, on the other hand, can put his administrative skills to use in any portfolio.

Brian Smith: It is true that Smith, moving in to his new role as MLA, has proceeded very carefully and cautiously. Some of his colleagues have suspected this shows a lack of leadership ability. But Smith didn't have to impress his colleagues, only the premier. He obviously did, and bets are the premier will be smarter than his caucus colleagues in this decision. The fact that they are tennis partners probably didn't hurt.

Hugh Curtis and Evan Wolfe: The goal of having these two change jobs remains mysterious. Perhaps Wolfe was sick of finance, having spent four years there, and wanted to go somewhere else. Perhaps Bennett wanted a somewhat more authoritative minister as head of the Treasury Board as he begins to wrestle with further spending cuts. Perhaps Curtis had once expressed an interest in deregulation. Anyone's guess is as good as anyone else's.

The rest of the pea-patch: That leaves the question of why Bennett did not take more active steps to rid his cabinet of embarrassments. True, he put Jim Hewitt back to agriculture after a lacklustre year as energy minister, but that was miniscule compared to the steps he might have taken.

Uninspiring

Tom Waterland remains as forest minister despite an uninspiring performance for a full four years. Jim Nielsen remains in consumer and corporate affairs after a year marked mainly by the departure of many of the ministry's senior staff. Grace McCarthy, despite much intriguing before-shuffle speculation, remains unscathed.

It can only be hoped that this means Bennett has seen hidden strengths in these ministers that are not apparent to the public eye. The alternative — that the premier, like his father and Dave Barrett before him, is unwilling to take the really tough steps against those who are not performing up to standard — would not bode well for the government of B.C.

It would be an odd irony if Bennett's new-found strength in finding the right people for the right spots was negated because of his unwillingness to move the wrong people out of the wrong spots.

Misleading letter

A letter, laced with subtle sarcasm, signed F. E. Wright, appeared Nov. 16 concerning "Camosun's Priorities." The letter would have been quietly amusing if the implied meaning and direct references were not so misleading.

From time to time other letters have appeared sniping at Camosun. A few contain good sound criticism but too many are loaded with innuendo, badly researched if researched at all or not entirely factual, leading to a distorted interpretation of Camosun's aims and objectives.

In Wright's letter, the writer attempts to draw a parallel between a fully accredited music course and several non-credit, short term, evening fun courses namely belly dancing, sailing, contract bridge, beer and winemaking and bartending. Whereas the accredited music course allegedly cost the taxpayer $4,000 annually per student, the latter non-credit part time courses are offered on a cost recovery basis and continue to be offered only as long as they are financially self-supporting. They are incidentally, usually over subscribed and realize a handsome net return with students paying the full fee. Any attempts to compare the two catagories of courses is unrealistic - like apples and oranges. Priority does not enter into the matter, I suggest any contemplated elimination of the music course is a simple matter of economics.

Numerous career oriented credit courses of a cultural nature are offered through the Camosun College calendar. There is also a wide variety of non-credit, short-term evening courses offered under the headings of Music and Dance, Drawing and Painting, Languages, etc., appealing to the "cultural needs of the community."

Lets have the facts straight, undistorted and devoid of insinuation, or assumption. — R. Dewhirst, 940 Garthland Road.

Receipt presents

I've hit upon a gift idea a few years ago I would like to share with you.

For the ones on your list for whom you are stuck and don't know what to buy them this year; there are numerous charitable organizations around today, and any one of them you think are doing something worthwhile will be happy to make out a receipt in someone elses name.

On Christmas morning this gift will be perfect, just a receipt but it means so much. You couldn't go wrong on color or size, no need to worry about duplicates, or it never being used. Anything from one to a hundred dollars it doesn't matter in this case, its really the thought that counts.

We also celebrate this day because its Jesus Christ's birthday, and he once said that if you turn away your fellow man in need, you also turn away from Him.

So by giving something to the poor or an organization that works to help them, its like giving Him a birthday gift.

Christmas means a lot to our family, it's a time we all get together, and look up friends we seem to have forgotten through out the year. We feel that we are fortunate, and or hearts open to those who are not. So when we look beyond the glitter and comerciaism, we believe Jesus is with us, especially at this time of the year.

So when the propaganda gets you down you can do this if you like, I know our Christmas was a little happier when I gave receipts a few years ago. — R. Clausen, Victoria.

Sad parting

It is good for democracy to have seats contested and I will welcome the newcomer to the board with interest and pleasure.

However, as long-time member of that board, I cannot let it pass without saying how much I will miss Jack Armstrong. He has served the students of the district long and well. His prime concern has always been the provision of good education to all students, regardless of their ability. He has spent many hours on their behalf.

Provincially, he has served on BCSTA committees and just recently did an outstanding job as my representative on a very thorny review commission.

He was a dedicated school trustee, always honest, never devious, and always a gentleman. Even if we did not agree with him at times, we always knew that he stood by his principles.

Hawkers welcome

Today we heard that, once again, someone, this time the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is down on the harbor hawkers. May we, as residents, comment? May we also comment on how we saw them when we first arrived early this summer, since we then saw them as tourists?

We thought, and think, that the hawkers were useful and added to the busy harbour scene. We saw nothing wrong with them, either in terms of their numbers or their wares. We were, in fact, captivated and delighted. We were, and frankly still are, surprised and amazed at the abuse heaped on them.

After Mr. Glazier's abusive remarks we specifically went and looked at them in the harbor context again. We could find none that were dirty, unkempt or whatever the other pejoratives were that Mr. Glazier was quoted in the papers as using in his reference to them. Some of them were longhaired, indeed some of them were dressed as most young people (including tourists) were. This did not make them any of the things they were called. Their stands, carts, etc. as nearly as we could see were not especially tatty and were not in any way unattractive. In short, we liked them there and would like to see them there again next summer.

Since my office is in the Customs building, I saw these people at last twice a day and my wife often did as well. At no time did we ever notice any indication that tourists were put off by them.

We would like to go on record as saying that we heartily disagree with the recommendation that they be banished to the lower level. The hawkers in fact, add color and life to the promenade. — Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Cooper, 134 Linden Avenue.

Dedicated students

Just a little note to let you know some good things about a group of young people. (We hear so much today of the minority of teenagers who cause trouble).

On Nov. 14 at Mount Douglas high school 350 young musicians played their hearts out for an audience of approximately 1,000 people! It was a grand evening and the discipline — both in behavior and playing — was excellent!

There were two bands from Arbutus Junior, two from Cedar Hill Junior, and the concert band from Mount Douglas.

These youngsters attend at least two early morning practices a week. This is at 8:00 a.m., before school starts, besides their regular music classes. It takes a lot of practice at home, too, to keep proficient in their instruments.

I think they all deserve a pat on the back. Don't you? — Mr. and Mrs. H. Creswick, 1810 Grandview Drive.

About that movie

I recently had the 'privilege' of viewing a film entitled "About Sex" which has I understand been used in some high schools in the Vancouver area. The film was made available to the schools by the Planned Parenthood Association.

The unanimous reaction by those parents, who included city aldermen in Vancouver and school trustees, was that the film was immoral and probably pornographic.

The purpose of this letter is to make parents aware of this type of film and also the activities of the Planned Parenthood Association in our school system. — John S. Craggs, Director, United Citizens for Integrity.

The party of 'Bible Bill' is going to the dogs

By JEFF SALLOT
The Globe and Mail

It was a shock to the system for many delegates to the Alberta Social Credit Party annual convention the other day when they arrived here and found that the entertainment at lunch was a sexy belly dancer.

Those who recovered from that were probably ready for Friday night's cash bar and Socred disco. But the party of William (Bible Bill) Aberhart broke with all tradition when the annual business meeting was held on Sunday morning. That's the time when good Socreds traditionally tune in the Bible Hour on the radio as they clear the breakfast dishes and get ready for church. The times have certainly changed. There was strong opposition to the Sunday morning session, but it came as much from those who wanted to get home to watch the Calgary-Edmonton football playoff as to get to church.

Reporters covering Socred conventions in years past were advised to pack their own flasks. Socred conventions were dry, sober affairs. Convention organizers seemed to go out of their way to be iconoclastic this year.

ABERHART
. . . times have changed

The idea was to attract news media attention and to show the Socreds themselves that they don't have to be a bunch of sticks-in-the-mud.

The changes, however, were cosmetic and couldn't disguise the fact that the party is in deep trouble. This was the 45th annual convention and there's no guarantee that the party will be around to celebrate its 50th.

The Socreds, who came to power in 1935 under the leadership of evangelical radio preacher Bill Aberhart, governed a predominantly rural province for 36 years. Even when the party couldn't legally implement the "funny money" social credit theories of Major Clifford Douglas, it continued to win election after election because "Bible Bill" and his competent successors provided the kind of dull, good government which appealed to farmers and ranchers. The discovery of oil started a social and economic revolution in Alberta, which the Socreds never really understood. The province was urbanized. Oil became big business. By 1971 there were a whole lot of city folks in Edmonton and Calgary who found that the party held no appeal for them. That year, Peter Lougheed, a sharp Calgary corporation lawyer, brought his new-style Progressive Conservatives to power. The Tories have never looked back.

The once-powerful Socreds have been trounced in the last three elections. As a pitiful official Opposition, the Socreds have been reduced to four MLAs. They won only 18 per cent of the popular vote in last March's election. They need $250,000 to get on a stable financial footing.

One of the Socred MLAs, Ray Speaker, has spoken openly of disbanding the party. There has been talk of changing the party name to the Alberta Party, a move that was rejected at this convention. Individual Socreds have tested the waters to see whether a merger is possible with the Alberta Liberals, a group even more prone to disastrous losses.

Party leader Robert Clark, 42, has been in the legislature for almost 20 years. He's tired and he's thinking of quitting next year when he can collect a full legislative pension.

But the greatest tragedy for the Socreds, and thus for Alberta, is that the party is bereft of any new policy ideas. There were no major policy resolutions at this convention. At a so-called hot seat accountability session, delegates asked who paid for the belly dancer. That was one of the toughest questions. Nobody asked Clark or the other three caucus members why they lost the election or where they think the party should be going. Clark had said he was prepared for a blood-letting at this convention, but the delegates seemed to be suffering from anemia and there wasn't very much gore.

Is the party going to stick with its small c conservative traditions, emphasizing free enterprise and attacking what they see as creeping socialism as evidenced by the Tories' purchase of Pacific Western Airlines? Or will the party try to move to the centre of the political spectrum, where Peter Lougheed found his power base? Nobody asked.

The Socreds ran a "me-too" campaign in March. They tried to make more and bigger election promises than the Tories. The Socreds' main election plank was a promise to use the oil-rich provincial treasury to cut personal income taxes.

Alberta desperately needs a strong political opposition if for no other reason than to keep the Tories on their toes. But that alternative leadership is sorely lacking. In the 3½ years to the next election, the Socreds are facing crises of leadership and of policy direction. But the first task is probably just to stay alive.

So maybe the belly dancer wasn't such a bad idea. She at least got a few hearts pumping again.

Blunting the Arab oil weapon

ROBERT STEPHENS
London Observer

The crisis in Tehran is dramatic confirmation of the extent to which Iran and the other countries of the Gulf and Arabia, with their vast oil reserves and strategic location, now form one of the world's politically most sensitive areas.

It also demonstrates how little Western military power can do to influence developments there.

The decision by Khomeini's Islamic revolutionary regime to embargo oil exports to the United States has once more raised the spectre of the oil weapon — of an oil famine bringing Western industrial societies grinding to a halt through the action of politically hostile governments in the Middle East.

That the Khomeini embargo was pre-empted by President Carter's ban on oil imports does not alter the underlying dangers.

The "threat" to Western oil supplies has hitherto usually been seen as coming from three sources: high OPEC prices; politically motivated but temporary embargoes such as that imposed by the Arabs in the 1973 Middle East war; and the more permanent blocking of access to oil through chaos produced by local armed conflicts or by Soviet-backed anti-Western regimes "turning off the oil tap."

It is fear of the last remote contingency that has led to the wild talk from Washington of "sending in the Marines" to take over the Gulf oil fields.

U.S. military intervention in Iran in the present crisis would almost certainly mean a Soviet counter-intervention which the Russians, with 12 divisions near the Iranian border, would be far better placed than the Americans to carry out with non-nuclear forces.

An attempted U.S. takeover of, say, the Saudi and Kuwaiti oil fields might seem initially more feasible but would soon run into great difficulties, with the impact of a super-Suez throughout the Arab and Muslim world.

Most wasteful

To mitigate the effects of another temporary embargo, the main Western oil importers formed the international energy Agency in 1974 with a plan for oil-sharing. They also agreed on a program of national conservation and energy development measures, a program which has had little effect in practice, especially in the United States, which is still the world's biggest and most wasteful consumer of oil

If Carter had not made the U.S. a willing victim, the Iranian embargo would have been very difficult to enforce. As the Arabs found in 1973, the oil companies exercise very effective control of international distribution.

In any case, the loss of 500,000 barrels a day, or 5 per cent of U.S. oil imports, is of less impact than the Khomeini regime's reported decision to cut all oil exports by five per cent and its earlier cut in production by nearly half from six million barrels a day, to 3.5 million barrels a day (of which 700,000 barrels a day is for domestic consumption).

Those measures led to prices for Iranian oil on the spot market going up to $45 to $50 a barrel, compared with the new OPEC ceiling price of $23.

These decisions, indeed, formed part of the most significant new development in the oil policies of the OPEC countries (only half of which are Arab) since the big price rises of 1973-74.

This is the trend among the OPEC countries to restrict their oil output for economic rather than political reasons. If this trend is maintained, it will mean that Western oil consumers as a whole will have to adapt themselves to living with less as well as dearer oil. They will have to restrain their energy consumption generally and accept lower or zero growth rates unless oil supplies can be supplemented by an increase in other energy sources.

In this context, the most important aspect of the Iranian revolution is its impact on other countries of the Gulf, especially Saudi Arabia, in matters of both oil and security.

Under the Shah, the West, especially the U.S. and Britain, counted on Iran, backed by huge American arms supplies, to be a kind of proxy policeman in the Gulf after the British withdrew in 1971.

The shah made repeated attempts to get the agreement of the Arab States to Gulf security arrangements, but failed because the Arabs, especially Iraq, would not accept the Shah's claim to hegemony in the area. They feared the military clauses of a pact might legitimize Iranian intervention in the Gulf States to preserve the status quo.

Imprecise

Khomeini's foreign policy has so far been as imprecise in detail as his domestic policies, though its outlines are fairly clear. His movement towards non-alignment was confirmed by this month's abrogation of the 1959 defence agreement with the U.S. and the intervention clauses of the 1921 treaty with Russia. He seems to be anti-American without being pro-Russian.

He says he renounces the wide hegemonistic ambitions of the shah in the Gulf and beyond, so doesn't need the vast arsenal of modern weapons the shah was acquiring. His oil policy is to produce and export only what is necessary for the well-being of the Iranian people.

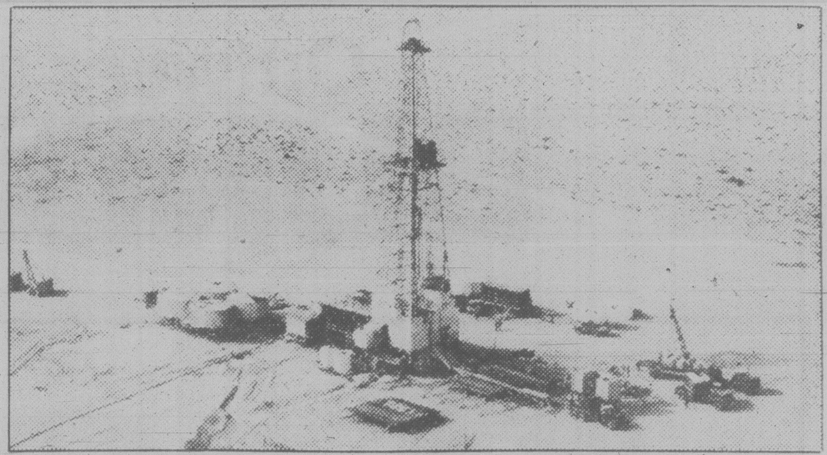
Hitherto the West relied on Saudi Arabia to expand its production to compensate for any shortfall in supplies from Iran or other OPEC countries in the Middle East, as well as using its influence to keep OPEC prices down. Now, after the Iranian revolution, Saudi Arabia can no longer be relied to fill this role.

The revolution in Iran demonstrated that military power, whether domestic or Western, cannot save a regime which is going rotten from within. The Saudis believe that one of the main causes of the shah's downfall was severe domestic inflation caused by pouring greatly increased oil revenues into development too quickly.

Saudi Arabia's rulers have less fear of Muslim religious reaction because of the still strongly Muslim character of their society, but they are slowing down the pace of development for the sake of political stability.

Finally, there are the other economic arguments for restricting output: oil in the ground is a good investment, the best hedge against inflation; and conservation now means that the reserves of oil will last longer.

Until now, the Saudis consider, their economic interest has been sacrificed to wider considerations. They have seen themselves as helping prevent the collapse and possible Communisation of Western countries on which, in the long run, they depend for technological and political support and arms supplies.



Saudi Arabia oil well . . . there's no military solution

This position has become increasingly difficult to maintain because of the lack of progress towards a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict. The continued absence of a reasonable solution for the Palestinian Arabs and for the future of Jerusalem increases the domestic political threat to the survival of pro-Western Arab governments.

Saudi Arabia and the smaller Arab states of the Gulf have already felt obliged to take sides with radical Arab states such as Iraq, Syria and Libya, against Egypt's peace treaty with Israel and the Camp David peace proposals.

The Arab oil states are under increased pressure to make more drastic use of the "oil weapon" against the United States.

What can the West do to meet this situation?

1.It has to accept the fact that there is no military solution to the problems of social and political change in the Gulf countries and of access to their oil. Oil no longer flows from the barrel of a gun. It has to recognize that the West now depends for its oil supplies on the goodwill and self-interest of the oil producing countries. This means that in its own interest the West must make a far greater effort to adapt to living with less oil, including a much more serious conservation program and development of alternative energy sources.

Keep out

2.To preserve peace in the Gulf, the West and the Soviet Union should continue to keep their forces out of the area on the basis of the tacit non-intervention policy accepted by the U.S. and the Soviet Union in Iran. The West should encourage a regional agreement between the Gulf states on greater economic and security cooperation, including freedom of navigation through the Gulf. They could underwrite an agreement on the Hormuz Straits similar to the Montreux convention for the Dardanelles.

3.To build up a sound cooperative relationship between the Arab oil producers, with their ambitious development plans, and the Western industrial countries, the West, especially the United States, must do its utmost to bring about as quickly as possible a reasonable settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict which satisfies the Palestinians' aspiration for a state of their own.

Without such a settlement, relations between the West and the Arab States, and the future of the Gulf regimes, will inevitably remain precarious.

Great galloping swamis

Russell Baker

Undeterred by the fact that not a single vote has yet been cast, American journalism is fast putting the 1980 presidential campaign behind it. Reading the papers and watching the tube, you get the impression it's all over but the voting.

Deep immersion in this ocean of words leaves the potential voter humbled to the point of feeling useless. What needs the country with a mere voter when it has so many swamis of the pointed phrase and the authoritative microphone to settle the national hash without the nuisance of ballots?

Although the voting is still a year away, press and TV have already eliminated a number of would-be presidents, are straining to get rid of more of these wretches before the first primary and have reduced the competition to a field small enough to provide the melodrama necessary to make politics amusing journalism.

It is no wonder that fewer and fewer Americans bother to vote any more when election day finally arrives. By that time press and television have conducted the election for us and a trip to the polls seems superfluous.

The journalists ridicule this idea, but at the same time promote it by the assiduity of their labors. For the past six weeks and longer they have been faithfully pointing out that most of what passes for political news at this stage of the business is bound to be insubstantial and inconsequential. After this bit of ritual lip service, however, they turn into alchemists and, lo, nonsubstance and inconsequence become the heavy tonnage of reality.

Even casual followers of the swamis have seen ponderous events during the past few weeks. Is there anyone, for example, who does not know that Ronald Reagan has become the "front runner" among Republicans? Or that Reagan's enviable lead is, nevertheless, not so enviable as it appears from examining the first non ballots? And that the reason for this is that Reagan's frontrunnerhood is "soft"?

And why is it "soft"? Because Reagan may have been "around the track once too often" and may, therefore, be too "familiar." What's more, his age counts against him. Reagan is over 65. All this becomes clear in the wake of. In the wake of what? In the wake of heavy non voting in all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Since one of the largest and most active voting blocs in the country is the over-65 group, why is Reagan's age not a political asset? The journalists are silent on this. Doubtless they will study next week's meaningless non-elections in crucial Arkansas and give us the answer.

The interesting Republican candidacy of Rep. John Anderson has gone down the pipe. Anderson has been untested at the ballot box and found wanting. Anderson won't do. Surprisingly, George Bush will. Bush has shown "surprising strength" at the non polls, which is more than he showed at the polls when he ran for the Senate in Texas and got beat.

Speaking of Texas, John Connally is the big threat to Reagan. Connally has the big-money people behind him. That's what helped Nelson Rockefeller get the Republican non-nomination. Moreover, Connally is a renegade Democrat camping among the elephants, and the elephants have only three or four life-long Republicans to choose from now that journalism has reduced the field.

And there is Sen. Howard Baker. Poor Baker. He has been a disappointment in every meaningless event to date. Journalism has already cut him down to a possible vice-presidential nomination, which is more than Gov. Jerry Brown has been able to win. At this stage of journalism, the jig is up for Brown unless Sen. Edward Kennedy is beaten by Chappaquiddick.

Journalism, of course, is already beating Kennedy with Chappaquiddick as vigorously as the professional creed permits. And since Watergate, it permits plenty. Punch-drunk by accusations that they were tougher on Nixon than they were on John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, the swamis seem determined to take redemption out of the junior Kennedy's hide. Followers of the press election will have noted that Kennedy's lead over President Carter has already climbed.

If events continue in journalism at the present pace, the election should be over before the New Hampshire primary. This could be a blessing for the electorate, though the journalists may have second thoughts and decide not to grant it, once it dawns on them that ending the election quickly will require them to go back to Washington and resume their struggles to deal with the economic story.

Economics is no fun. You can't dispose of inflation with a non event, the way you can toss presidential candidates over the wall after consulting your navel.

House hunt on for Vietnam refugee family

The St. Andrews Presbyterian Church Committee has a problem.

A committee-sponsored family of seven Boat People will arrive in Victoria soon but unless a Good Samaritan comes forward, the family will have no place to live.

Committee chairman Jan Wouterlood said today he asked for a family of seven because he arrived in Canada with his wife and five children from the Netherlands 20 years ago.

"We don't know when they will arrive, it could be next week, it could be next month," he said.

While the congregation of St. Andrews has responded well with items of furniture and money — there is close to $5,000 in the bank for the refugees — Wouterlood said nobody so far has been able to provide accommodation.

He said his committee has been offered a rented home but is is in bad shape with windows out and needs rewiring and carpentry.

The cost of fixing te home up is estimated at between $1,000 and $5,000.

His committee has also gone to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

CMHC was sympathetic but only had two-bedroom condominiuns and told Wouterlood the rules forbid overcrowding.

He's appealing to anyone who has a basement suite or other accommodation to help his committee out.

A rental of up to a $300 ceiling monthly could be paid and the accommodation would be needed for a year.

Wouterlood can be reached at 382-4523.

Deadly drinks flow despite four deaths

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four Skid Road regulars died last week after drinking a Lysol and hairspray concoction, but it's not likely to stop others from seeking homemade highs, area residents say.

"Some of the guys down here, they'll drink anything," said Moe, a former prisoner who traded his knowledge of the streets for cigarettes.

He was interviewed outside the Wonder Rooms, a rent-by-the-day hotel where three men and one woman have died after drinking the mixture. Police say all four apparently were at the same drinking party.

The drink, Moe said, is a mixture of Lysol — a household disinfectant — and hairspray with water, fruit juice or pop used to dilute the cocktail and make it more drinkable.

Talk on the streets is that some of the "cocktails" also contain straight methyl alcohol and anti-freeze.

"That stuff will kill you," Moe said. "It's all right at first, you get a buzz, get a little bit high, but then, you're flat out."

Most of the hard-core alcoholics can raise the price of a bottle of cheap, fortitifed wine, or a few draft beers.

"But Sundays (when liquor stores and beer parlors are not open), that's when they do their best business," said a resident, pointing to a pair of neighborhood grocery stores.

The stores sell Lysol for $2.79 for a small can.

Clerks at two stores told a reporter they were out of Lysol, but customers who obviously were hard-core alcoholics were observed purchasing the product.

The cans were sold from beneath the front counter — along with other favorites such as Sterno and hair tonic — and are not stocked on shelves.

Tougher enforcement on the sale of liquor alternatives have made usual standbys like bay rum and vanilla extract harder to get, but police and social agencies find it hard to keep complete control.

Symptoms of methyl alcohol intake are similar to ordinary alcohol at first, but the joy of being drunk soon turns into a terrifying experience.

"You know how it goes," said a Skid Road regular. "Some guys will drink anything that gets them off. They hear that it works, get a few bucks together and slap, it's lights out."

Interest lost in military

Many Canadians have lost interest in defence matters, says Vice-Admiral John Allan, Canada's coastal defence chief.

Allan also says fleet and shore establishments at Halifax and Esquimalt must be modernized, especially in light of the Soviet Union's naval buildup.

Young people cannot be expected to have an interest in the military if their elders do not do so.

"Canadians must believe in the value of the forces to help us maintain a strong position in the world's political and economic councils as well as to protect the country in the event of an emergency."

Victoria changes complexion of Canada for Quebec girls

The people of Victoria have rosy cheeks and are even more British than touted by tourist guides.

Those were two of the surprising conclusions reached by 26 visiting Quebec schoolgirls after a week's exchange visit with the families of Norfolk House school girls in Victoria.

The group returned Sunday to Montreal, where they will prepare for a visit by the Norfolk House girls in February under the auspices of the federal government's Open House Canada program.

The Quebec girls left feeling they had learned much about the style, habits, likes and dislikes of fellow Canadians their own ages but with different cultural and linguistic background.

Meeting Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and Premier Bill Bennett was an overwhelming success, the girls agreed during an evaluation discussion Friday.

The girls said they were surprised at constantly being asked their political views by Victorians.

Some other surprises:

People drive and live slowly in Victoria.

Families appear very close, very warm, very sincere and are very friendly.

Socreds ran poll on free phones

The incident occurred last April, four days before the election writ was issued.

Party workers used phones in the premier's suite and in the Socred caucus offices to place between 600 and 1,000 calls.

People polled were asked how they felt about an election at that time, how they voted in the last election and how they thought they might vote in the next one.

The government pays B.C. Telephone Co. a flat fee for its Telpak service which provides direct phone lines to most major communities in the province so the poll did not waste any taxpayers' money.

However, it probably saved the Socreds a sizeable chunk of cash that would otherwise have come out of party coffers.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser, who was the minister responsible for communications when the incident occurred, said he never authorized the use of government lines.

Saanich appeals on land reserve

Saanich council will appeal to the Agricultural Land Reserve Commission for exclusion of 25 acres in the North Quadra area.

Council voted 4-3 on the move Monday at a public hearing attended by about 60 people. Mayor Mel Couvelier and Ald. Geoff Vantreight were not at the meeting.

The land, off Beckwith Avenue, is wanted for park and residential use.

The controversial item has been before council four times and four times set aside. It was opposed by the South Saanich Farmers Institute, greenbelt organizations and Saanich residents.

They say the land is good for farming and should be kept as greenbelt.

Several aldermen said they would only vote for removal if the land is needed to keep development cost charges down in the nearby North Quadra subdivision.

Aldermen were told Monday exclusion of the 25 acres will have no effect on residential development in North Quadra.

B.C. Hydro owns the 25 acres and will sell 12 acres to the municipality for use as parkland.

A condition of sale was removal of the entire property from the ALR so the other acreage can be developed.

Former alderman Ian Cass was the only member of the public to speak in favor of the exclusion.

Greenbelts surround the 250-acre North Quadra subdivison but there is a desperate need for more houses, said Cass, vice-president of the Victoria branch of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

"The housing situation is bad and rental accomodation worse; it's deteriorating every day," Cass told council.

Greenbelt Association President Hal Knight said the municipality is taking bits of land here and there out of the ALR.

"We do it in small amounts but it all adds up," he said.

Productive farmland has decreased in the Capital Region District by 20 per cent during the five years between 1971 and 1976, provincial government statistics show, Knight said.

Ald. Irene Block said she opposes the removal because she doesn't believe council should make money for B.C. Hydro.

There will be 55 lots going on the other 12 acres, she pointed out.

"As long as that land stays in the ALR, it stays greenbelt."

Ald. John Mika and Howard Sturrock also voted against the removal.

But Sturrock said local groups contradicted themselves by first calling the property top notch agricultural land and then saying it wasn't.

After the meeting SSFI president Richard Fatt said he is quitting because political pressure was applied by some aldermen to members of the organization.

He said he had nothing to do with a letter submitted to the hearing by secretary W.C. McKechnie that stated the institute's directors have taken all factors into consideration and now believe the property isn't suitable farmland.

Last month members of the institute executive appeared before council to oppose the appeal, saying the land has considerable farm value.

Architects gather at Crystal

British Columbia architects meet this weekend in the renovated Crystal Garden for the annual meeting of the Architectural Institute of B.C. and to celebrate the 60th anniversary of its founding.

Among the issues the AIBC is expected to tackle is advertising by architects.

A Festival of Architecture will be mounted in the Newcombe Auditorium featuring a series of films with architectural themes. Friday night at 7 there will be a triple bill costing $2 aimed at adults, with films on the construction of Gund Hall, the school of architecture at Harvard, and building your own house and heritage restoration.

Prof. Allan Gowans of the University of Victoria art history department will give an illustrated lecture on the return to decoration in post-modern architecture.

Saturday is for children with films from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Pepper the clown. Admission is free.

Commercial area okayed

Saanich council Monday approved construction of a 40,000-square-foot commercial centre on vacant property just north of University Heights shopping centre.

But not before two aldermen at a public hearing accused developer Donald Hanley of misrepresenting his case to local residents who signed a petition supporting the development.

Hanley told residents they had a choice between a low-slung commercial shopping centre or a four-storey apartment building on that site, said Ald. Irene Block.

There is no guarantee council would have passed an apartment block for the property if the shopping centre proposal was rejected, Block said.

The 54 residents who signed the petition were shown a design of an apartment building, Hanley confirmed, adding that he did not have that design with him.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said showing residents apartment sketches decreased the validity of the petition.

Ald. Sandy Noel, who lives in the area, said he is nervous about the danger of development creeping further along Shelbourne and into residential Gordon Head.

However, municipal planner Gil Laurenson said the neighborhood plan being developed by staff will control future commercial expansion in that area.

Ald. Mary Casilio said the application was well designed and a that home owners behind the proposed centre would have a better view than they have now.

"I think people would be further ahead than looking at K Mart," Casilio said.

Staff will consider the possibility of a development permit with Hanley before council passes the rezoning bylaw.

'Barracks' design rejected

It's back to the drawing board for a developer who wants to build six townhouses at Torquay and Shelbourne.

Saanich council approved Westpark Management's rezoning application Monday, but won't give it final reading until the company changes the design.

Westpark's plans for the 1.26-acre site were described by some residents as an army barracks, a jail and "a bloody mess."

Several Gordon Head area residents said their property would be devalued if the developers were allowed to construct the townhouses using the current design.

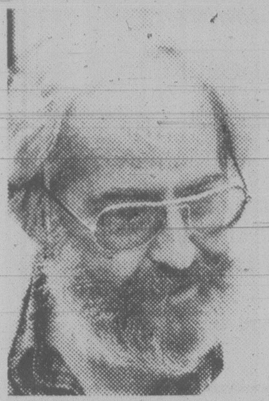
Well known poet to read

John Newlove writes poetry that Margaret Atwood has described as that of a master builder.

The well known Canadian poet and Governor-General's award winner will be reading from his work at Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort, Thursday at 8 p.m.



NEWLOVE

The Saskatchewan-born author, currently writer-in-residence at the Regina Public Library, has published nine books of poetry, the most recent of them entitled The Fat Man, a book of selected poems.

His work has been widely published in magazines and anthologies in Canada, the United States, Mexico, Australia, England and Europe and has been translated into French, German and Roumanian.

Admission to the event which is under the sponsorship of Canada Council, the League of Canadian Poets and Open Space, is free to the public.

New minister 'astonished'

B.C.'s new minister of labor is astonished to hear that B.C. Federation of Labor president Jim Kinnaird objects to his appointment.

Kinnaird said Jack Heinrich is an unknown, inexperienced in labor matters, and this will work to everyone's disadvantage.

"I guess that will remain to be seen, won't it?" was Heinrich's reaction Monday.

He said he hopes to meet with Kinnaird next month and added: "I don't think he really has anything to be alarmed about."

Premier Bill Bennett indicated to reporters Friday that Heinrich had useful experience for his new portfolio but Heinrich made clear this is not the case.

He said his Prince George law firm has done a great deal of work in labor matters but he, personally, has not done any.

However, the new minister takes it all in stride.

"I'm not really concerned that I haven't any previous experience in labor. Maybe it's going to be to my advantage," he said.

Heinrich said in his opinion the Socred government has a very good relationship with organized labor.

"Certainly if there is room for improvement I'll do my very best to improve the environment of it all."

Officers' beefs get study

Chief officers on the ferries are reported to be refusing to take over as relief masters because the pay differential is too low.

There also are complaints that, despite management assurances, ferry captains are not being consulted on policy matters.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser Monday commented: "We don't negotiate in the press. It's all part of contract negotiations."

But when pressed, the minister admitted there are no contract negotiations under way and agreed that both sides just signed a new two-year agreement.

Then are the complaints valid?

"I really don't know," Fraser admitted.

He said Ferry Corp. management will examine the situation.

Mair planning to review girl's death

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Health Minister Rafe Mair will review the transcript of an inquest into the death of a 10-year-old Kamloops girl.

Mair, who was appointed minister in Friday's cabinet shuffle, said Monday he will follow up on a promise by former health minister Bob McClelland to review the transcript.

Deborah Cunningham died of head injuries four days after being struck by a softball. She was examined at Royal Inland Hospital and released a day before she died.

Old age collapses bridge

If you're planning to drive to Port Renfrew you'll have to go by way of Shawnigan Lake for the next few days.

Sooke RCMP said today a bridge over Jack Elliot Creek at Mile 14 of the West Coast Highway collapsed Monday.

There was no vehicle on the bridge at the time.

Highways officials said the collapse was caused by old age.

Driver breaks down at trial

The driver of a car involved in a fatal accident Nov. 15 told a coroner's jury Monday night he did not see the elderly pedestrian until "he was right in front of me."

Karl Latzel, 64, of 4556 Seawood, was testifying at an inquest into the death of Bruce Cooper, 86, of Port Washington, North Pender Island.

Latzel broke down on the witness stand as he told the jury he had learned just minutes before the accident that his wife, a heart attack victim, would be allowed to come home from hospital.

Cooper died in Royal Jubilee Hospital 10 hours after the mishap which occurred at about 1 p.m. in the 1600-block Richmond.

Pathologist Dr. Frank Berry said an autopsy revealed he suffered a fractured skull, lacerations to the brain, a cerebral hemorrhage, fractured left ribs and a broken left hip.

Berry said the actual cause of death was probably aspiration of stomach contents into the lungs, although any of the injuries could have caused death in an elderly person.

Cooper's daughter, Edith Noreen Hill of 1035 Banks, said her father had come from North Pender to visit his wife, a patient at Gorge Road extended care hospital.

She said he was in good condition for his age although he was inclined to get a little muddled at times.

Constable Dennis De Frane said he measured a 60-foot skidmark and indicated that Latzel was likely travelling above the speed limit.

The jury was told Latzel was issued a traffic ticket for driving without due care and attention.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to next Monday when he is expected to charge the jury.

Few feel window rattler

BELLINGHAM (AP) — An earthquake rated at 3.9 on the Richter scale — strong enough to rattle windows — struck this community Monday afternoon but few people felt the tremor, officials said.

Frank Baldwin, a technician at the Newport Geophysical Observatory near Spokane, said instruments placed the centre of the quake in Bellingham.

A Whatcom County sheriff's employee said a few people felt the quake in the courthouse in Bellingham, including a jailer on the sixth floor. But there were no reports of damage.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area.

Alta. willing to deal on oil

OTTAWA (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed brought a bag of goodies to barter for higher oil prices and continued control over energy resources and revenues at a meeting scheduled for today with Prime Minister Clark.

Alberta Energy Minister Merv Leitch, making the first official statement Monday on the position the province will take at the meeting, said that in exchange for higher prices and resource control Alberta was prepared to:

— Link domestic oil prices, and consequent increases, to U.S. oil prices rather than follow a format of fixed price rises at projected time intervals.

— Accelerate oil sands development and invest $3 billion to $4 billion from the Heritage Savings Trust Fund in equity and debt financing in the next two oil sands projects.

— Give Ottawa a larger share of income from future oil sands developments by accepting less favorable commercial terms for itself.

— Provide the costly organization for permanent and accelerated oil sands development.

— Accept Quebec City instead of Toronto as the new "gate price" for gas, which means Alberta producers would pay the cost of transporting gas to Quebec from Toronto.

— Help finance five major new energy projects in other provinces.

The meeting may represent the Ottawa's last chance at an agreement that would facilitate planning of the federal budget.

'77 female convicts: 16% killers

OTTAWA (CP) — Homicide was the second most common crime for which women went to prison in 1977, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Of the 200 women in penitentiary that year, 32 or 16 per cent were in for murder or manslaughter. Conviction on drug possession or trafficking charges was the reason the largest number — 37 per cent — was there.

The largest percentage of men went to prison in 1977 for robbery, with break-ins, drug-related crimes and homicide the next most common offences.

Of the five women who began serving life sentences for murder in 1977, none had been in prison before. It was also the first time in prison for more than 71 per cent of the 125 male murderers who began serving life terms — a minimum imprisonment of 25 years before they become eligible for parole.

The report shows 4,715 men and 112 women went to prison in 1977, bringing the total population in 57 Canadian penitentiaries — where all sentences of over two years are served — to 9,335 at the end of that year.

Another 14,946 men and women began serving sentences of less than two years — most often for drunken driving and other alcohol-related offences — in jails and reformatories in the Maritimes and Manitoba, the only four provinces which reported these lesser terms to Statistics Canada.

As of the end of 1977, the prison population appeared to have levelled off. There were 2.5 per cent more people in prison then than in 1973, and the number increased only 0.5 per cent from 1976.

Most of the men admitted to penitentiaries in 1977 were young, single high-school dropouts and almost half of them had been in prison at least once before.

Two-thirds of the men and women who went to prison were under 30 years old. Of those who reported their education, 76.7 per cent of the men and 67.4 per cent of the women had completed some schooling between grades 1 and 10. But only four per cent of the men and 4.3 per cent of the women had any education past high school.

More than half of the male prisoners and slightly more than 40 per cent of the women were single.

After robbery, break-ins, drug crimes and homicide, the most common offences for which men were sent to penitentiary in 1977 were theft, rape, possession of stolen goods and assault.

Crimes either shunned by criminals or not punished harshly by the courts that year included bigamy, corrupting public morals and impersonating a policeman. No one went to prison on any of those charges in 1977.

One government official was imprisoned for accepting bribes and two men were convicted of procuring women for illicit sexual intercourse.

Two men were imprisoned for making threatening telephone calls and another for making indecent phone calls.

Bank joins in mortgage cut

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bank of Montreal announced Monday it will reduce the rates it charges on mortgages, citing a general lack of demand for mortgage funds.

The reductions, which take effect Wednesday, come on the heels of similar announcements by several trust companies.

The bank's conventional five-year closed rate drops one percentage point to 13¾ per cent from 14¾; the NHA five-year closed rate falls to 13¾ per cent from 14½.

The conventional three-year closed mortgage rate drops to 14¼ per cent from 14¾; the NHA three-year closed rate falls to 14 per cent from 14½.

The conventional three-year open rate drops to 15¼ per cent from 15¾; the NHA three-year open rate to 15 per cent from 15½.

A bank spokesman said the rates were reduced because of a lack of demand for mortgage funds.

In New York, Chase Manhattan Bank accelerated the decline in interest rates Tuesday by dropping its prime lending rate a half point to 15¼ per cent, the lowest of any major bank.

The decrease by the third biggest U.S. bank leapfrogged the quarter-point cut made by two large banks Monday, which analysts said signaled the start of the long-awaited decline in record-high interest rates.

Bankers Trust, the eighth-ranked commercial bank, in the U.S., Monday touched off the prime rate decline — the first such break this year — with a quarter-point decrease. It was followed immediately by only one of the top 20 banks, No. 11 Wells Fargo of San Francisco, but a general cut by the industry was considered only a matter of time.

At 15¼ per cent, the prime still remains 3¾ percentage points above its low point of the year — the 11½ per cent that was charged in June and July. In July the rate began its upward climb that continued unabated until this week.

Clark's gov't change of style

Joe Clark is adopting much of the structure but not the style of government of Pierre Trudeau, a former insider told students and professors at University of Victoria on Monday.

Dr. Audrey Doerr, chairman of political science at Simon Fraser University who was for a time a member of the privy council office staff in Trudeau's government, spoke in a public lecture on the transition in government.

She rated Clark's performance in the first six months at two on a scale of three, and noted that although there is still confusion and jostling for position at the top, it appeared professionalism in the public service is threatened.

Her observations lead her to conclude that the same processes in new relationships will be used to bring a new measure of accountability to government. It is designed to streamline decision-making, but it remains to be seen whether cabinet ministers will be able to make decisions easier.

Politicians will have to learn quickly what their responsibilities are in line with the parliamentary subcommittee system. The system has been reduced to 12 committees with chairmen who may not be members of the newly-created inner cabinet, the final deciding body.

That situation alone could result in a two-tier system of government, with junior and senior cabinet ministers, Doerr said.

Many changes and reorientations had become clear in the first six months of Clark's regime, she said, and it was apparent he appreciates the structure and procedural stress established by Trudeau.

But the prime minister had also stressed that control should belong in Parliament rather than in the cabinet and a powerful senior administration.

As evidence of this, in less than six months privy council clerk Michael Pitfield and Gordon Robertson, cabinet secretary for federal-provincial relations, have departed, leaving a vacuum in the Canadian public administration.

Presto! One mini elevator pops up

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A revolutionary event took place recently on the Beacon Hill bus — for the first time in Canada a handicapped person in a wheelchair took a ride on a regular transit bus.

Exactly when it occurred and the name of the pioneer were not recorded for posterity but it happened on one of four B.C. Hydro buses which have been altered to accommodate the handicapped.

The front doors have been widened and a lift mechanism installed which changes at the touch of a button from ordinary-appearing stairs into a mini-elevator that drops down flush with the curb and lifts a wheelchair up to the floor of the bus.

The two front-facing seats flip up to reveal a locking mechanism and seatbelt which can hold two wheelchairs in place while the bus is moving.

The buses went into service without fanfare and drivers and passengers are enthusiastic about them.

"I'm just thrilled with it," says driver Ross Stark.

In the first week he carried four people in wheelchairs.

He uses the lift more than half a dozen times a day for other people as well — a paraplegic partially paralysed, elderly people who are unsteady on their feet.

"It saves a lot of time and money too. I'd like to see them on all the buses."

It's a six-month demonstration project by the Urban Transit Authority and B.C. Hydro with the $90,000 cost of altering the buses provided out of provincial lottery funds.

The UTA wants to determine if altering regular buses to accommodate the handicapped is the best way to provide transit for the disabled, or if custom service is the route to follow.

Although U.S. law requires all bus systems accepting federal funds to make their vehicles universally accessible to the handicapped, the lift-equipped buses have never been tried in Canada by a regular transit system.

American experience with them runs the gamut from horror stories to acclaim, according to Larry Miller, assistant general manager of the UTA for the Victoria region.

Kansas City, which added the lifts to its entire fleet, saw its buses immobilized one cold winter morning when the lifts' hydraulic system froze and popped the buses' doors open. No buses moved that day in Kansas City.

But Tacoma, which is equipping its buses with the same lifts as the Beacon Hill buses, has nothing but praise for the system, says Miller.

The Beacon Hill project is part of a demonstration of various styles of transportation for the handicapped. The UTA recently discussed a different pilot project for the handicapped who live in the Battin-Fielding centre and use the Garth Homer centre in Saanich.

The UTA wants to test the effectiveness of small vans and buses — like the Lions' vehicles used for carrying children — against the lift-equipped B.C. Hydro buses, which will themselves be tried out in different areas.

"We think philosophically a combination of the two is the route to go in a metropolitan area," Miller says.

After six months on the Beacon Hill route, Miller says the buses will probably be tried in other B.C. communities and neighborhoods. Penticton is an example, a medium-sized Okanagan city where one bus can cover the whole town and provide access for the handicapped no matter where they live.

Now, wheelchair-bound Victorians can ride the bus only if they live in James Bay or downtown somewhere along the Beacon Hill bus route, which covers a relatively small section of Greater Victoria.

The UTA originally chose Victoria as the site of the demonstration because of the high percentage of elderly (and thus handicapped persons) in the city proper — 24 per cent. The Beacon Hill bus was selected for conversion because the James Bay area has a large concentration of senior citizens, and the route could be served with only four buses, three running every day and a fourth available as a spare.

TOWN TALK

What's the difference between $100 and $1,000,000? One dirty digit, that's what.

Just ask the 10 members of a small syndicate of Greater Victorians who have been buying Provincial lottery tickets for nearly three years.

They've won the odd $25 over the period they've been buying but never really come close to the big prizes.

The man who says all B.C. high school students should graduate with a good working knowledge of Canada's second language doesn't speak French himself.

"You're hearing this from somebody who doesn't speak French and I feel that acutely," new education minister Brian Smith told reporters.

"I actually got an MA degree in Canadian history from Queen's University without speaking a word of French, and I think that's bad."

The minister would like to see, within 10 years, all high school graduates comfortable with the French language. But that is only a worthwhile goal; it will not override the main objective — "to produce students equipped to handle the world and have a good basic education."

His talent as a deep sea photographer drew raves at a global photographic exhibition in England which had 4,000 entries.

Cooke took second and third places in two categories and won silver and bronze medals.

His success should hearten amateur shutterbugs who hope some day to turn out a perfect picture.

He's never attended a professional photographic school and learned to photograph underwater subjects from a fellow scuba diver and developed his art from there.

And if that isn't enough, Brent's recognized as an outstanding wood carver.

The case of the lost stamp album has finally been solved, thanks to the persistent efforts of Victoria Craig.

Mrs. Craig found the album outside her store, Craig Comfort Shoes, 642 Yates in mid-October.

The only identification was a name, Stephen MacKay, in the handwriting of what was obviously a young person.

She phoned different MacKays without success and appealed to the school board for help.

Local radio stations picked up the story the night MacKay happened to be listening and he picked up his album last week.

The tiny but indomitable Socialist Party of Canada just keeps plugging away.

The party's general executive committee has elected Larry Tickner as general secretary, replacing George Jenkins, who is stepping down for health reasons.

Tickner says he'll continue to work to "reaffirm the long historic affinity the Socialist party has with the working class".

The man who, as registrar of travel agents, set up the government's travel assurance fund to assure B.C. residents they'll get to fly later if they pay now, is leaving government service.

"I'll probably go back into marketing or consulting," says Alec Burden, adding that he doesn't have anything specific lined up.

"I wasn't hired away by industry or anything like that. I've done the job here; it's becoming more and more an administrative position and I need a challenge."

Sawmill, plywood layoffs forced by slumping sales

By MIKE HUGHES

Depressed lumber markets in Canada and the U.S. will result in the short-term layoff next month of hundreds of sawmill and plywood plant employees on southern Vancouver Island.

Sooke Forest Products Ltd. will lay off about 220 employees and B.C. Forest Products will close its plywood plant from Dec. 24 to Jan. 6.

The BCFP closure will result in the layoff of about 300 employees although some will be taking holidays, company spokesman Gordon Winters said today.

He said it is unusual for the company to have to shut down at this time of the year and indicative of grim lumber market conditions.

Winters said the poor markets are mainly the result of high mortgage interest rates, inflation and the sale of alternative building materials such as particle board.

Hershell Smith, president of Sooke Forest Products, said the company will lay off 185 employees next week and another 35 the week before Christmas.

Smith said the workers will likely all be back on the job early in January when the company starts up its Sooke mill again.

"At the moment the lumber market in Canada and the U.S. is in a complete shambles," Smith said.

He said prices are dropping by as much as $75 to $100 per thousand board feet.

As a result the company is forced to shut down for a while and try the market again in January.

Smith said he is optimistic there will be turn-around in the market conditions.

He said it is the first time in 28 years that his company has had to shut down.

He is mildly critical of the provincial government because he said the Socreds have expressed their concern at the plight of the independent logger and sawmill but aren't doing anything about the situation.

Meanwhile, Roger Lewis, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said today he is concerned about the situation.

"I think by mid-December we are really going to be feeling the pinch," he said.

He said it is possible that Plumper Bay Sawmills will be closing down about then, putting another 75 people out of work. Victoria Plywood spokesmen have also said they only have enough work to keep their 200 employees working until around Christmas.

Representatives of the IWA's western regional office are to meet in Ottawa Thursday with Prime Minister Joe Clark to discuss the effect rising mortgage rates are having on the B.C. forest industry.

But Lewis said he doesn't see any short-term solution.

"It is shaping up to me that we are a facing some pretty tough sledding in the next six months."

Winter here says deputy

Victoria deputy fire chief Fred Severson gives this case in point.

He says the fire department has been getting a rash of calls recently from residents smelling smoke in their homes.

The moment the firemen enter the houses they know the cause — a burned out furnace motor.

Severson says it's a perennial problem — the clearest sign of all that winter's advancing.

He says homeowners should make sure they have their furnances regularly maintained.

Otherwise they take the risk of the furnace fan getting stuck when the switch is turned on. When that happens the motor burns out, the house fills with smoke, and the alarm bells start ringing once again in the fire hall.

Fire loss hiked $60,000

The loss from Monday's fire at Smitty's Pancake House at 1150 Government has been put at $260,000, up $60,000 from the first estimate.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson said that in addition about $10,000 water damage was done to the basement and first floor of the Bastion Inn next door.

Severson said an investigation into the fire, which broke out at 1:30 a.m., is continuing but firemen are almost certain the cause was a failure in an electrical box near the kitchen of the restaurant.

Surrey assigned to northern run

The future of the ferry Queen of Surrey has finally been settled.

The vessel will be used on the Port Hardy-Prince Rupert run as originally planned and will not replace the Princess Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle run.

Meanwhile, no replacement has yet been found for the Marguerite.

The B.C. Ferry Corporation Monday signed a $7.5 million contract with Burrard Drydock in Vancouver to fix up the Queen of Surrey for the northern run.

Extra cabins will be added, the interior will be renovated, mechanical improvements will be made and the Surrey's distinctive, rakish bow appendage will be removed.

The work is to be completed in time for the Surrey to start service next June 1 as scheduled.

The B.C. Ferry Corp. decided a year ago to commit the Queen of Surrey to the northern run as a replacement for the Queen of Prince Rupert which is too small to handle the traffic.

However it became evident a replacement was needed for the Princess Marguerite.

A struggle developed within cabinet over priorities — was an improved service to the north coast more important than freighting in thousands of big-spending Americans to boost Victoria's tourist-oriented economoy?

The north coast service has emerged the winner.

The decision is seen as a blow to the B.C. Steamship Co. Ltd., which operates the Victoria-Seattle run for the provincial government.

General manager Arthur Elworthy recently said approval had already been given for changes to the docks in Victoria and Seattle in order to accommodate the Queen of Surrey.

Elworthy was not available for comment today.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose Tuesday in a continued wave of Wall Street euphoria over an apparent end to the interest-rate spiral of the past four months.

Chase Manhattan Bank today sliced its prime lending rate to 15¼ from 15¾ per cent. Smaller banks matched that cut or followed Bankers Trust's lead Monday in dropping the prime to 15½ from 15¾ per cent.

Either way, it was the first cut in the prime rate since August, and analysts saw continued reductions in the key rate, which is charged by banks on loans to their best commercial customers. Experts say that a lessening of the rates will help business by cutting interest expenses. The Federal Reserve Board has been taking steps to boost interest rates in an effort to control the U.S. money supply.

Killanin wins longest struggle; now Taiwan must make decision

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (CP) — Lord Killanin has won his longest battle, and the athletes of China are firmly in the Olympic Games at last.

The jolly Irish president of the International Olympic Commission (IOC), after years of resistance from the more conservative members, was given overwhelming backing for his plan to let both parts of China compete in the Games together.

Athletes of mainland China now may take part using the name, flag and anthem of the People's Republic of China. But the politically stubborn authorities on Taiwan must climb down, abandon the name and flag of the old Republic of China and use a special Olympic flag to be approved by the IOC.

IOC members voted by 62-17 to back the plan. Included in the votes were Canada's two IOC members — James Worrall of Toronto and Richard Pound of Montreal.

Tainwan's Olympic Committee was holding an emergency meeting today to discuss how to protest the result. It had earlier launched legal action against the IOC in the Swiss courts.

Peking has accepted the plan. The national Olympic committee of Taiwan has until Jan. 1, 1980, to swallow its pride and change its name.

No one can guess what Swiss judges may make of the situation if it reaches the courts.

Complicating the situation is the fact that the IOC is almost law unto itself. It is answerable to nobody. Its 89 members were chosen as individuals to be its representatives in their countries. They represent none but the IOC.

The 140 national Olympic committees around the world are not constituent members. They are simply recognized by the IOC as the bodies to develop the Olympic movement in their areas.

The Olympic committee in Taiwan has screamed defiance, claiming that the IOC's new plan contravenes rules 64 and 65 of the Olympic charter. These rules spell out quite clearly that every team in the Olympic Games must march behind its national flag in the opening parade, and that its national anthem must be played at the medal presentation ceremonies.

However, rule 23 of the charter says the IOC is the final authority on all questions concerning the Olympic Games and the Olympic movement.

Lawyers may argue that this gives the IOC the right to bend its own rules at any time.

Killanin now knows that when the full IOC meets before the Winter Games of Lake Placid in February, he can easily get rules 64 and 65 changed to fit the situation, if necessary. There are no meetings planned before then.

The votes were enclosed in blank envelopes, so nobody knew who had voted this way or that. But a dozen or so Latin American members were believed in the last line of resistance in the fading cause of Taiwan.

In the past, Killanin has failed to break down diehard support for Taiwan. Its champions have claimed that it always obeyed Olympic rules and that its choice of name and flag and anthem were its own affair.

However, now the IOC has come to see that unless it turns away from its traditional course it may have never-ending trouble over Taiwan whenever the Games are held.

Mainland China, with almost one billion people, would never let its athletes take part while Taiwan was competing and insisting that it was the Republic of China.

The absence of China, the world's most populous country, has been the biggest gap in the IOC's idealistic bid to bring the youth of the world together in sport.

The mainland is expected to make a splash in speed skating at Lake Placid.

Team entries close Dec. 1, so the Taiwanese have five days to decide whether to send their skaters and skiers — or their lawyers — into action.

So much for the Grey Cup. The better team won even if the Eskimos did play it almost too cautiously in the closing minutes. But what to do, when ahead, is always a problem in a big game such as the Grey Cup. Do you go into a shell and hope to keep the opponents pinned in their own end, which the Eskimos did? Or do you go with your normal game plan, which the Eskimos didn't? Edmonton coach Hugh Campbell admitted afterwards he had second thoughts about his decision to keep the ball on the ground. Still, it worked, he was right and who wants to second-guess a winner.

Meanwhile the Alouettes also proved a point — that those live by the sword, die by the sword, eventually. The Alouettes are noted for their defence and that defence includes hard tackling and "intimidation". The latter is often in the form of late hits or unneccessary roughness. Sunday, it didn't work and, if they "wuz robbed" as coach Joe Scannella suggested, it wasn't because of what they were called for, that's for certain. This one wasn't decided by the officials. It was the Alouettes themselves who blew their own cover when, if they had stuck strictly to business, they might have made it even more interesting than it was. They were playing well enough. And who's to say these two clubs won't be at each other's throats again next fall?

* * *

Otherwise, here's one for the books, a racing oddity occurring at Cloverdale Raceway, Thursday, that may be a first for standardbred, or thoroughbred, racing anywhere. And thereby hangs this tale.

What happened was this:

Two separate winners were declared in the same race and there wasn't a dead heat for first, although it was listed that way in the press.

Neither of those two winners was listed in the first three of the same race won by the other.

Two separate payouts for first were made. Two separate payouts for the Exactor were made. The track lost a bundle. And all because the judges made a mistake in a saddlecloth.

* * *

It was the second race on a 10-race card which featured the leading standardbred driver in Canada, Ron Waples. But more about him another time.

The race drew eight starters, Kahoka Jeff drawing in from the also-eligible list, starting from the No. 3 hole, but carrying the No. 9 saddle cloth. (This is a change from previous years when a horse drawing in from the also-eligible list wore the saddle cloth number of the horse it replaced, which, in this case, would have been No. 3). And that's what was to cause the confusion. But read on.

Second, No.2 Miss Rajan ($11.60, 4.40);

Third, No. 7 Bosco Frank ($2.30).

* * *

The winners smiled and rushed to the cashiers' wickets. The losers cried "foul" and rightly so. For the real winner of the race hadn't been listed. It was No. 9, Kahoka Jeff. (Just ask the man who had a ticket on the bay gelding).

Seconds later, when it was realized an error may have been made, the infield mutuel board went dark and the track announcer intoned:

Your attention, please. Please hold all mutuel tickets. This was repeated again . . and . . . again.

First, No. 9 Kahoka Jeff ($14.50, 6.70, 3.50);

Second, Miss Rajan, and third, Bosco Frank.

The place and show prices were the same as before and No. 5, Mac Page, the original winner, was now fourth.

Having been posted, all payoffs were honored which meant a double payout, the track being responsible for the mixup.

Although the officials goofed, there is an explanation. The No. 9 saddle cloth, worn by Kahoka Jeff, was a poorly painted-over No.5 and, in a quick look on a rain-drenched track, it was mis-read.

Later in a back room of the general office at Cloverdale, a second look at the offending cloth, which now has been retired, showed why.

But two separate winners in one race! That has to be just a little different, as all bettors, especially those who had No. 5, should agree.

Alouettes seek Forzani

MONTREAL (CP) — Wasting no time after their Grey Cup defeat to Edmonton Eskimos last Sunday, Montreal Alouettes plan to step up their efforts to acquire wide receiver Tom Forzani from Calgary Stampeders.

The Alouettes are currently attempting to land Forzani, a veteran Canadian Football League performer, in a complicated three-way deal that would involve the Grey Cup champion Eskimos.

When the Alouettes traded middle linebacker Carl Crennel to Edmonton earlier this season, they were said to have been promised a choice of one of four players to complete the deal.

The four players apparently offered by the Eskimos were pass receivers John Konihowski, Brian Fryer, Stu Lang and Marco Cyncar.

"Konihowski doesn't want to come to Montreal," said Alouettes general manager Bob Geary. "We feel Fryer may be too injury prone. Lang is too old and doesn't want to move out of Edmonton anyway, and I don't think we're interested in the other kid," he added, referring to Cyncar.

Geary said that Montreal was working on a three-way deal but Calgary general manager Jack Gotta wants cash.

As a possible solution Geary said: "We get Edmonton to agree to a cash settlement for Crennel instead of a player and give it to Calgary, and they send Forzani to us. Maybe we'll have to sweeten the pot a bit."

Small crowd for Esks

EDMONTON (CP) — About 100 people greeted Edmonton Eskimos at the airport Monday as the Grey Cup champions returned home from Montreal where they defeated the Alouettes 17-9 in the Canadian Football League championship Sunday.

Some said the small crowd could be due the first snowfall of the winter which made driving to Edmonton International Airport, about 30 kilometres south of the city, somewhat hazardous. And Eskimo fans are used to seeing their football team perform.

The official welcome and parade will be held today.

Sittler's ankle is bad news to Maple Leafs

Times News Services

Toronto Maple Leafs received some bad news Monday that was almost as bad as feared.

The National Hockey League club will lose the services of team captin Darryl Sittler for at least two weeks.

Sittler twisted his right ankle Saturday night during a game against Chicago Black Hawks. He played part of the first period Sunday against New York Rangers before being forced out of the game.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Swedish star Thomas Gradin has signed a contract with Vancouver Canucks which commits the 24-year-old centre to at least four more years with the team.

Vancouver general manager Jake Milford, commenting on the Gradin signing, also confirmed reports that team captain Don Lever has signed a multi-year contract. Terms of the agreements were not released.

Scoring statistics released Monday show the Los Angeles Kings' line of Marcel Dionne, Charlie Simmer and Dave Taylor is by far the most productive in the league.

The threesome picked up a total of 15 points (five each) last week as Dionne continued to set the over-all pace with 20 goals and 26 assists for 46 points, 10 more than Simmer.

'Pine Boys' spark '76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two of the '76ers "Pine Boys" turned opportunity into achievement as Philadelphia downed Indiana Pacers, 113-112.

The "Pine Boys" is Steve Mix's euphemistic description of the Philadelphia bench, which he and Henry Bibby so frequently occupy.

However, both players got off the bench Monday night to spark a second-half surge as the '76ers captured their third straight National Basketball Association victory.

It was the only game Monday night.

Playing in his first contest since dislocating a finger last week, Mix scored 25 points, with Bibby adding 21.

"I felt good that I was able to contribute to a win, but I was just one of the cogs in the wheel," said Mix, whose 25 points surpassed his previous season's high of 23.

"We have 11 different individuals on this team — 11 different personalities — but we all think 'win,' " he explained.

Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham said he decided to stay with the "Pine Boys" because they were doing so well.

"The bench did a great job for us," Cunningham said. "Indiana played outstanding basketball."

The '76ers' Mickey Johnson was the game-high scorer with 30 points. Clubmate Mike Bantom added 27.

Clarke loser in Totem

BURNABY (CP) — Rick Pughe of New Westminster defeated Brad Clarke of Victoria 9-1 Monday to win the Totem Bonspiel and a berth in the Pacific Coast Curling Association final in February.

Pughe had an easy time in the final match, stealing three in the first end when the Clarke quartet missed four open hits.

The winners stretched their lead to 4-0 in the third end and stole three in the fourth when Clarke wrecked on a corner guard.

In other events at the Totem's 25th anniversary meet, Del Willis of Abbotsford took only five ends to defeat Mike Clinyk of New Westminster 8-1 in the B final and Gary Sigurdson of the Vancouver club tripped clubmate Wayne Smith 6-2 in the C final.

Al Frame of Victoria won F event, Gerry Martin of Vancouver D event and Willie Palendat of Valley Club E event.

Zorn and Hawks streaking with best

They're streaking right along with the best of them in the National Football League.

With Zorn setting two more club passing records in the first-ever Monday night game in Seattle, the Seahawks crushed New York Jets 30-7 for their third straight victory and fifth triumph in six weeks.

"I'm really confident now," said Zorn. "I wouldn't say I'm in any kind of a groove but I feel like when the receiver makes his move, the ball is going to be there."

"He's a pretty effective quarterback," said Jets' coach Walt Michaels of Zorn.

Coming off a club record 384-yard passing performance against New Orleans, Zorn once again was in command, picking apart the Jets' secondary behind an offensive line that didn't allow him to be sacked once.

He completed 25 of 32 passes for 285 yards and three touchdowns, including 14 straight completions. The 25 completions and 14 straight completions were Seattle club records.

Three Seattle players were injured. Special teams member Don Dufek broke a leg, offensive guard Bob Newton left the game with a knee injury and guard Tom Lynch suffered a back injury.

Because the American Football Conference is stronger than the National Football Conference, the Seahawks, now 7-6, will have a hard time making the playoffs in their fourth NFL season.

They have to win all three of their remaining regular season games.

"All we can do is play like we have a chance," said Seahawks coach Jack Patera.

"I've got to give our line and our receivers credit," said Zorn. "Our line really has been blocking well and our receivers have been running great routes."

Zorn's touchdown passes were 14 yards to his favorite target, Steve Largent, in the second quarter, 16 yards to running back Sherman Smith in the third period and 11 yards to Sam McCullum in the third quarter. All came on third-and-10 situations.

The victory gave the Seahawks a 2-0 Monday night record. They won at Atlanta 31-28 four weeks ago.

"It's great any time you win," said Zorn, "but it's even more fun when you win in the only game of the day."

"They (the Jets) play pretty conservatively on defence," Patera said.

Richard Todd, the Jets' young quarterback, was 19 of 36 for 226 yards and drove his team to a touchdown in the third quarter. Kevin Long scored for New York on a one-yard run.

Efren Herrera accounted for Seattle's other points on field goals of 49, 45 and 42 yards.

PRESTON, England (Reuter) — Bill Werbeniuk of Winnipeg defeated Ray Edmonds of Britain 9-8 to reach the semi-finals of the British professional snooker championship.

Cougar aggressivness might help stop Pats

Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe does not enjoy emphasizing any penalty parade in junior hockey but he appreciates the aggressiveness that has helped mark his team as the best penalty-killing unit in the Western Hockey League.

The topic was forced on Shupe because the Cougars, sporting a league-leading penalty-killing efficiency of 87 per cent, tonight face Regina Pats, who happen to be the most effective utilizers of the power play.

Game time, at Memorial Arena, is 8:30.

Yes, said Shupe, he is pleased with Victoria's penalty-killing. The Western Division leaders have allowed only 15 goals in 117 shorthanded situations this season. Only four in the last 14 games, and none in the last four outings.

"The big thing is their aggressiveness," he said of the penalty-killers. "They go right at the other team . . . make them do something with the puck in a hurry. That doesn't allow the opposition to set up their power-play box."

The Pats, one point out of first place in the Eastern Division, have scored 54 power-play goals in 149 chances for a success ratio of 36 per cent. The Cougars happen to be No. 2 in power-play scoring, but Victoria's percentage is 28, "good" by junior standards but well behind Regina's showing.

With a 16-5 won-lost record, Cougars' success and style has been reflected at the box office.

Couars have attracted 37,505 fans to their first 13 home games for an average of 2,885. A total of 10,055 have turned out to the last three games at Memorial Arena. The total and game average are the highest ever enjoyed in Victoria in the pre-Christmas period.

With victories in 12 of their last 14 games, the Pats shouldn't hurt Victoria's attendance figures. Neither will Doug Wickenheiser, the outstanding Regina forward who has moved into first place in individual scoring with some prolific production in recent weeks.

Wickenheiser has 32 goals and 26 assists, five points ahead of Gord Stafford of Billings Bighorns.

Wickenheiser is the only player in the league to record at least one point in every outing.

Lee Pimlott of Victoria emerged as the surprise winner of two titles after results were tabulated in the British Columbia women's tenpin bowling championships held over the past three weekends in Abbotsford.

Pimlott, who has a 148 average, captured the scratch singles crown with a sizzling 190-194-245 — 629 series rolled Nov. 18, won the handicap title with a 753 and was runner-up in all-events with 1,997.

In the impressive final game, Pimlott managed to connect with five strikes, a spare in the ninth and another strike in the 10th.

Three other Vancouver Island bowlers also won titles.

Charlene Primrose and Linda Belko of Campbell River topped handicap doubles with 1,363 and Susan Tuck of Lake Cowichan won the handicap all-events with 2,015.

Joyce Stoddard and Sal Mosdel of Vancouver emerged with the scratch doubles crown and Stoddard captained the team called Koret of California to both team titles.

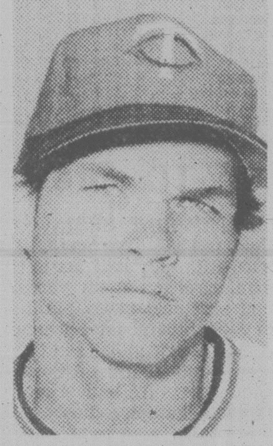
TORONTO ROOKIE SHARES AL AWARD

ALFREDO GRIFFIN



JOHN CASTINO

TORONTO (CP) — Alfredo Griffin worked hard at his profession all last baseball season. Now he's reaping the awards.

The 21-year-old Toronto Blue Jays shortstop was named Monday co-winner of the American League's rookie-of-the-year award with Minnesota Twins' John Castino.

Next season Griffin will find that he's no longer working for a rookie's wages. Jays' president Peter Bavasi promised that the team's first major award winner will get a raise.

"I had a feeling this would happen," Bavasi said. "There was a marked improvement in his play during the season."

Griffin earned between $25,000 and $30,000, but Bavasi wouldn't be pinned down to the raise.

Griffin and Castino received seven votes apiece from a 28-man committee of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. Relief pitcher Mark Clear of California was third with five votes. Relief pitcher Ron Davis of New York Yankees, first baseman Pat Putnam of Texas Rangers and pitcher Ross Baumgarten of Chicago White Sox had three.

Uncontrolled cable TV hurting baseball: Kuhn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major league baseball may cut down on the number of locally-televised games if Congress does not curb the sports broadcasting authority of cable television, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Monday.

Testifying before a House judiciary subcommittee considering copyright legislation, Kuhn said current federal law and regulations permit "uncontrolled importation of distant signal sports telecasts" by cable television systems.

"The sports interests cannot live with the effects" of this, he told the subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice.

"For baseball, at least, the only alternative may be to change its established telecasting practices by reducing the number of games available over local television stations," Kuhn said. "This is a result which we earnestly desire to avoid."

Kuhn said the existing law has forced professional baseball into a "most complicated and costly controversy" before the copyright royalty tribunal, created by Congress in 1976 to distribute cable television royalties.

Broadcasters have asserted they, instead of the sports clubs, are the copyright owners of sports telecasts.

"We have strenuously resisted the broadcasters' attempts to subvert obvious congressional intent by expropriating these royalties," Kuhn said.

"Regardless of how this matter is resolved, the professional sports clubs will be left with the very serious problem of having to contend with the existing compulsory licensing scheme," he told the subcommittee.

"It is this scheme which permits CATV (cable TV) systems, without our consent and over our objections, to saturate our home territories with distant signal sports telecasts."

Kuhn said his office had discussed the "potentially devastating impact" of this in arguments to the Federal Communications Commission.

He said Pittsburgh Pirates, winner of this year's World Series, were 18th in attendance in the major leagues in 1978 and "it is surely no coincidence that the Pirates have been subjected to more CATV importation of competing distant signal baseball telecasts than any other major league baseball team."

Kuhn said the problem has been compounded by the development of so-called super stations, most of them in major league baseball cities, whose signals are transmitted, with or without their consent, by cable television. He said these super stations carry a heavy volume of sports.

The commissioner said the FCC already has eliminated many restrictions on cable television and now is proposing to do away with all "regulatory inhibition to cable's flooding the markets upon which our clubs depend for broadcast revenues and fan support with that staggering amount of sports programming presented by all of the super stations."

Kuhn urged the lawmakers to restrict distant non-national network sports broadcasts into the home territories of professional sports clubs.

Ivy's tied for second

Brian Sutherland-Brown led Ivy's with 24 points, Barry Burch added 23 and Ian Scott chipped in 20.

Bob Godfrey topped Juniors with 25 points.

Petes world trip on again

TORONTO (CP) — The on-again, off-again participation by Canada in the world junior hockey championships next month in Finland is on — at least Ed Chynoweth thinks so.

Chynoweth, Canadian Major Junior Hockey League board chairman, said Monday that the CMJHL has co-operated fully, "since day one," in providing a team for the tournament.

In a statement, Chynoweth said the CMJHL is incurring the costs of equipment and extended insurance coverage for the players attending the competition in Finland and that "Canada will be represented at this year's world junior tournament."

David Branch, CMJHL executive director, said the team — Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League, supplemented by about eight other juniors — is standing by and the only holdup now is the necessary funding to cover the costs of transportation, meals and accommodation.

"We are taking steps to hopefully secure that necessary financial backing," Branch said.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced last week that it had decided not to send a team because of economics.

Gunther Sabetzky, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, responded by saying that Canada faced demotion to the second division in future junior tournaments if it was not represented at this year's global tourney, which begins Dec. 26 in Helsinki.

Responding to charges by Lou Lefaive, director of Sport Canada and chairman of Hockey Canada, that junior teams are hesitant to supply players, Chynoweth said: "Lefaive has no idea what is going on outside his ivory tower in Ottawa. He has not spoken to anyone connected with the CMJHL in the last 10 years, and yet he continually expounds what our thinking and policies are.

"If he is so concerned about Canada's image overseas, why doesn't he put his Sport Canada hat on and give us the money that we requested for this project back in December, 1978? As it is now, we have had to turn to the provincial government of Ontario for possible support."

The Petes' executive had asked Steve Paproski, federal minister of fitness and amateur sport, to check into the matter after being advised of the situation by the CAHA.

However, Paproski told the CAHA last September there would be no government funds forthcoming for the junior team and last week advised the House of Commons that funds for amateur sport were overdrawn $2.8 million.

Earlier Monday, a published report quoted Bill Domm, member of Parliament for Peterborough, as saying the situation "looks pretty encouraging," and that the CAHA and Hockey Canada appeared set to resolve the financial problems.

Aileen Gargett was elected captain during the annual general meeting of the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club women's division.

Fleming wins power battle

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Peter Fleming won a battle of powerful serves and volleys to down fellow American Roscoe Tanner 6-4, 6-3 Monday in the opening match of the $300,000 Masters tennis tournament.

The eight-player tournament, which continues through Thursday, is split into two round-robin groups. The first-place final, with $50,000 going to the winner, will be played by the two competitors which top each group.

Other top players in the event are John McEnroe and Vitas Gerulaitis of the U.S., Bjorn Borg of Sweden and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

In a rehearsal of next month's Davis Cup final, Gerulaitis defeated Italy's No. 1 player, Corrado Barazzuti, 6-4, 1-6, 6-2 in a B Group match. Borg defeated home idol Adriano Panatta 6-1, 7-6 to tie Fleming with two points in Group A.

A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS CONTEST

FOR OUR YOUNG READERS

Have you ever thought of designing your own Christmas card to send to relatives and friends?

They will appreciate your efforts. Probably your card will be stored away after the festive season and be a source of pleasant memories for years to come.

Besides that, you'll be able to participate in our new SPECIAL CHRISTMAS CONTEST with the winners receiving cash awards and island-wide recognition.

Just design your own Christmas card capturing the festive spirit. Your design can be in black and white or full color using either paints, crayons or magic markers.

There will be three categories: for 6 to 8 year olds, 9 to 11 year olds and 12 to 15.

The first prize in each category will be FIFTY DOLLARS. The first runner-up in each category will win $25 to put towards Christmas shopping and the second runner-up will win $15.

In addition, each winning drawing will appear in the edition published before Christmas day. One will be selected and will appear in color in the paper. The others will be published in black and white.

So get out your paints, crayons, magic markers, pencils or charcoal, along with a little imagination and send your entries on a white piece of paper no larger than 8½'' by 11'' in size to the Christmas Contest. Victoria Press Limited, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, British Columbia, V8W 3C4.

Don't forget to include your name, address, age and phone number and be sure to sign your name on the bottom right-hand corner of your drawing or painting.

TV variety show returns?

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Variety shows on television have long since joined vaudeville and burlesque in the boneyard of entertainment castoffs.

The last vestige of a weekly variety-comedy series was The Carol Burnett Show.

But there was a time when variety acts were showcased on TV with Ed Sullivan's long-running Toast of the Town, and to some extent the old Colgate Comedy Hour, The Hollywood Palace and Steve Allen's Sunday show.

Other music-variety-comedy conglomerations were turned out by Jackie Gleason, Sid Caesar, Joey Bishop, Milton Berle, Perry Como, Andy Williams, Glen Campbell and even more recently by Sonny and Cher, and Donny and Marie.

But today there is no evidence whatever of a weekly variety show on the tube.

Part of the difficulty was the static talent that moved from one musical-comedy-variety show to the next, often repeating the same banter and song. Costumes and production numbers took on a sameness.

Into this TV vacuum NBC has thrust a new pilot, Sunday Spectacular, starring Steve Allen and Gary Coleman as co-hosts.

The two hours of music, song and dance includes Peggy Fleming, Russia's defected ballet star Alexander Godunov and Cynthia Gregory, Dionne Warwick, Loni Anderson and Mimi Kennedy.

If Sunday Spectacular is highly rated, the network may attempt to insert the program into a weekly slot.

If Steve Allen is any judge, it can't miss.

"This is the finest variety show in the 30-year history of television," said Allen in a burst of uncharacteristic assuredness.

"It's truly spectacular. And I'm not referring to my contributions as head writer and host. It's two hours of beautifully produced excitement. It combines the best of my old Sunday shows and the Hollywood Palace."

NBC rented the largest stage in Hollywood — at Goldywn Studios — to accommodate what is perhaps the most lavish indoor set ever built for a TV show.

"The stage is 280 feet wide," Allen said. "At stage right is an enormous fountain of dancing waters. Next to that is a huge swimming pool for our aquacade numbers and beside that is a large ice rink.

"When our opening number flashes on the screen with a long shot of the entire stage, viewers will be stunned by the beauty, the color, action and music."

Allen sounded for all the world like an old vaudevillean pitchman. Like many another television pioneer, he is anxious to see variety make a TV comeback.

Trial opens on attempted murder charges

Six of an expected 30 prosecution witnesses were heard Monday in B.C. Supreme Court in the first day of the trial of a 36-year-old man facing nine charges — two of them attempted murder.

The trial of Thomas Young Lackey is expected to last until the middle of next week, Crown counsel Robert Mulligan, who is being assisted by Ken Salt, told the jury in his opening remarks.

Auto theft.

He is also accused, in Saanich on Nov. 8, 1978, of:

Possession of a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace;

Mulligan told the jury the prosecution expected to have witnesses say that Lackey was an inmate at Matsqui Institution, about 60 miles east of Vancouver, and that on Nov. 3 he was to be taken to hospital for treatment of an apparent back problem.

He was escorted by two guards, one of whom was Smith, when the first three offences are alleged to have occurred, he said. The prosecution alleged that Lackey stole a woman's car and eventually came to Victoria.

Mulligan said the jury will hear of a shotgun, which may have been sawn off, said to have been acquired by Lackey, and that he met Mark Graff whose car was taken from him.

This was reported to police and Hillcoat approached a car on the side of McKenzie Avenue. The prosecution would allege that as the policeman approached, Lackey fired a shotgun at him, with some pellets striking him. Hillcoat returned the fire, other policemen arrived, and further shots may have cost Lackey one eye, Mulligan said.

He emphasized to the jury that his opening remarks were not evidence but were intended to be a framework of what the prosecution expected witnesses to say.

Constable Roy Booth of Matsqui police said he was called to MSA Hospital in Matsqui Nov. 3, 1978, and saw a prison vehicle by the emergency entrance. There was blood on the headrest and the side of the back door and a pair of handcuffs in the back.

Constable Duncan Netzel of Matsqui police said he saw a private car in the Matsqui public yard the next day. He seized a green parka in the back seat.

He identified a type of staff jacket which he seized the previous day at MSA Hospital near where Smith was being treated. There were three holes in the back of it and one in the left elbow.

He assembled a group of photographs which he showed to Wilhelmina Havermans to see if she could identify the person who stole her car. He said she picked out Lackey's picture and there was some indication of another photograph she may have thought of.

In cross-examination, he said she indicated only one photographic selection but when asked if she indicated two, he said she could have.

Mrs. Havermans said she was visiting her mother Nov. 3, 1978, at a rest home in Matsqui in her husband's car and identified the car in the Matsqui public yard as thatcar.

While warming up the car to go to the bank with her mother, a man with a scruffy beard suddenly appeared in front, leaning on the car, looking quite ill, breathing heavily and dressed in green work clothes and a green parka.

She said the man asked if she could give him a ride to a doctor, and she agreed. Then remembering her mother, she got out, the man moved across to the driver's seat and when she told him to get out he took off.

She said she left her purse and identification in the car but no clothes and no kitchen knife.

At the police station, she was shown photographs and asked if she could identify the thief from the pictures and she pointed out someone. In court, she pointed to Lackey as the man.

She said the eyes of the man who took her car stood out. She agreed the man who took her car had a beard and the photograph she selected did not.

Mrs. Havermans also agreed Lackey was the onlyman at the preliminary hearing, other than court staff, lawyers and the judge, when she made an identification.

She said there was nothing similar, except for the eyes, between the thief and the photograph she selected.

But when asked if the man in the photograph has bulging eyes, she said "no sir."

She said there was no doubt the photograph she selected was the man who stole her car but agreed it could have been the person in another photograph which she also examined.

The trial, presided over by Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan, was to continue today. Lackey is being defended by Vancouver lawyer David Gibbons.

Before the judge

A 28-year-old man who was given a three-year probation in county court last week for attempted robbery was in provincial court Monday charged with breaching his probation terms.

Joseph Charles Edward LeBlanc was charged with breaching the condition, which called for him to keep the peace and be of good behavior, by threatening an employee of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, 1080 Douglas, the day he was released on probation.

Judge Frederick Melvin had given LeBlanc a suspended sentence and the three years probation after finding him guilty of attempting a holdup at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Fort and Government, on Sept. 25. LeBlanc asked a woman teller for $1,000, said it was a holdup when she asked why, and then suggested $40 when she said she couldn't give it to him.

In sentencing LeBlanc, the judge said any breach of the terms of probation would result in LeBlanc being brought back for sentencing and that a lengthy term would be in store for him.

In provincial court Monday, Judge Fred Green ordered a two-day psychiatric remand for LeBlanc, who was extremely unco-operative in his two appearances in court.

* * *

A 29-year-old man who stole $3,749.90 from his employer's safe Oct. 20 was sentenced to two years less a day in jail.

Gregory Bryce Smith, no fixed address, had pleaded guilty on Nov. 7.

During his 10-day employment as an assistant manager at the Quadra Pay-Less gas station, Smith took the money and was arrested the next evening getting off an aircraft in Winnipeg. Only $2,738 of the money was recovered, crown counsel Don Laughton told the court.

Defence lawyer John Hills said his client is an alcoholic who has little recollection of what happened to the missing money and only became clear of the charge after his arrest in Winnipeg. Hills said Smith was willing to take the Alouette River unit's alcoholic rehabilitation program.

Green said Smith's criminal record was disturbing and that the offence for which he was being sentenced was a serious theft from a position of trust.

He placed Smith on a year's probation, said he would write to the corrections classification branch concerning placement in Alouette River, and ordered Smith to take any alcoholic counselling or treatment as directed by his probation officer.

McKellar pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand and was given 15 days on the first charge and a further six days on the second. He was convicted Jan. 18 of impaired driving and was fined $400, Crown counsel Wayne Smith told the court.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Gary Allnut, 32, of Humpback Road, $1,250; David Charles Smith, 30, of 2318 Galena Road, $500; James Gordon Fletcher, 24, of 1120 Oxford, $325; and William James Albert Green, 40, of 4692 Hillwood, $300.

The parents of three-year-old leukemia victim Chad Green have turned down a $100,000 offer for book rights to their story because they feel "it's worth a million." "It's exhausting trying to keep up with it all," Gerald Green, the boy's father, said in an interview with the Boston Glove in Hastings, Neb., where the couple has been living since Chad's burial last month. Chad died Oct. 12 after his parents reportedly decided to cut off the chemotherapy treatments he had been receiving at a Mexican cancer clinic, preferring to treat the boy with the controversial drug Laetrile and a special diet.

Jerry Dwayne Massey, 19, deliberately swallowed a $10,000 diamond ring at an Anderson, S.C. jewelry store as he was trying to switch the ring for a cheaper one he had in his hand. Doctors tried to have Massey to cough up the ring by giving him a solution to induce vomiting. That failed and they then used an endoscope — a long tube with a camera attachment — to enter Massey's stomach and try to recover the 2.8-carat diamond. But that, too, failed to produce the ring. The jeweller was advised they would have to wait until nature took its course, which it did, and now the ring is in police custody and Massey is in jail.

Cindy Lienau is so excited she doesn't know how much underwear to pack, but it might not be a bad idea if she packed her long red underwear. The St. CLair Shores, Mich., mother of two, has been picked to drive a Zamboni on the ice rinks of Lake Placid at the 1980 Olympics and it gets mighty cold at Lake Placid in the winter. What's a Zamboni? Its the tractor-like machine which resurfaces ice. Mrs. Lienau has been operating a Zamboni — named for its inventor, Frank J. Zamboni — for five years at the local ice-skating arena.

The president of Gaslight Club, Inc., restaurants says he'd rather give away — or dump — Iranian caviar than make a profit off something associated with the Ayatollah Khomeini. So Robert Fredericks of Chicago is offering 14 pounds — $8,600 worth — of caviar to members. Fredericks also is banning Iranian products from the seven Gaslight Clubs. He is also taking up a collection to send five of his waiters back to Iran, claiming they took part in pro-Khomeini demonstrations. And the club in Washington, D.C., he says, won't serve Iranian diplomats unless they're blindfolded.

Dear Abby:

While putting underwear in my son's drawer, hidden far back I found several pages of sexy nudies, torn from a girlie magazine. To say I was shocked is putting it mildly, since he is an upright 14-year old Christian boy of high ideals.

I took the pictures from his hiding place and taped them on the door of his room. When he came home from school I told him I had cleaned his room and put his 'art pictures' where he could see them and enjoy them. He said thanks, and three minutes later he took them down and put them in the trash.

Was there a better way to handle this?

Rocky Mountain Mom

Dear Mom:

I suppose because your son disposed of the pictures, you feel you 'won.' You could be wrong.

It is important for young people to know that their privacy will not be violated. The next time he wants to hide something, he'll have to find a better hiding place.

Dear Abby:

Although I have been reading your column religiously for years, I never dreamed I'd be writing to you. However, I do not know to whom I should turn to settle this issue. You may think I'm a bit crazy, but it seems I get moody and irritable when there is a full moon.

Does the moon affect human behavior?

Rose Marie

Dear Rose Marie:

Those who have studied astrology claim it does. And I've read statistics indicating that the full moon activates the 'crazies.' (The word lunatic supports this loony theory.)

Dear Abby:

My brother, at whose home our annual family reunion was held this year, invited Steve, my ex-husband, without telling me about it. We've been divorced for 20 years, and communicate only when absolutely necessary. I had not seen him in the last 18 years.

I left Steve when I learned he was having an affair with another woman. He obtained a divorce on the grounds of desertion, which I did not contest. There was no alimony, no child support and no property settlement. We both remarried.

When Steve showed up at the reunion, you could have knocked me over with a feather! I was so shocked to see him there I didn't know what to do. I certainly didn't want to speak to him, so I just left without saying a word to anyone.

Did I do the right thing? If not, what should I have done? And why would my brother do something like this?

Hurt

Dear Hurt:

Why your brother would do such a thing, only he knows. Ask him. I think you acted wisely under the circumstances.

Lashes liven lacklustre lids

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

For $15 you too can have eyelashes like Carol Channing or Liza Minnelli.

But if butterfly lids don't fit your lifestyle, Nails & Lashes operator Kathie Mulligan will just improve nature a little by adding tiny wisps of synthetic lashes to thicken what's already there.

Kathie, an expert in the nails and lashes business, trained and worked in the company's Toronto office two years before moving to Victoria this summer.

One man started the operation about 20 years ago and now there are 32 shops across Canada.

So far her biggest trade is in the false nail business: customers range from a 72 year-old woman who works for a cab company to local musicians who use the chemically-created nails instead of guitar picks.

But the lash business is growing too, says Kathie, who counts housewives as her biggest clients.

The glue is strong smelling, but completely safe, she assures this doubtful reporter before the process of giving it a try begins. The company tests all products in its Toronto laboratory.

Lashes come in small, medium and long and in a variety of different shades. It's up to the client to select the look she wants.

Models usually pick the long, exotic lashes but most other women are more conservative, settling for a more subdued look.

And so do I. Leaning back in the dentist type chair I try to relax as Kathie begins to dab the sticky liquid on my right eyelid.

Small clumps of artificial lashes are carefully adhered to the real ones. Theyshould last about two weeks and fall off as the natural lashes do. Full treatment for both eyes is $15 and a lash fill costs $5.

Swimming is okay, but Kathie cautions her clients to be careful while standing under the shower because the velocity of the water might tear the lashes off.

The entire process takes about 20 minutes.

Petite elevated by fashion move

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO

New York Times

When designers such as Diane von Furstenberg and John Anthony start making clothes for petite women and a Madison Avenue shop sells more than 300 of a $130 dress in sizes 2, 4 and 6, you can be sure that small women are finally taking giant steps into high fashion.

It's true that scores of manufacturers have entered the field since Matthew Love Petite was begun four years ago as the big sister of the company's preteen line. But big-name fashion designers had shied away from the idea that anyone under 5 feet 6 would want to wear their clothes. And stores seemed to think it incredible that a small woman would pay more than $100 for a dress.

Small women had to wear the budget- to moderate-priced clothes being cut in their sizes. If they wanted anything more fashionable, they had to spend a fortune on alterations unless they could sew.

Diane von Furstenberg produced her petite line of dresses because, she said, "Women kept asking me to."

A collection of 10 silk dresses, each priced at $118, was introduced in mid-October at Saks Fifth Avenue. Both the store and Miss von Furstenberg agree that the response of customers was positive.

The von Furstenberg dresses are now also in Lord £ Taylor, Bloomingdale's, Burdine's, J. L. Hudson and other stores across the continent.

The first collection consisted of scaled-down versions of styles in the regular von Furstenberg line. For spring, new styles have been designed with petite women in mind.

The petite woman is usually defined as anyone from 4 feet 8 to 5 feet 4 who weighs between 85 and 125 pounds.

There are estimated to be between 15 million and 19million women in North America who fit that description.

Fitting these women is more than a matter of making clothes shorter. Generally, shoulders and necklines have to be smaller, sleeves shorter, cuffs narrower and waistlines higher.

"A lot of designers who are best at this," said Ellis Oppenheim of Piaffe, "are women who are small themselves, like Annemarie Gardin." His shop has sold more than 300 of Miss Gardin's printed crepe dress with a flare skirt, short sleeves and an elastic waist at $130.

It was a little more than a year ago that he opened Piaffe on Madison Avenue to sell sizes 2 to 8 proportioned for the petite woman. The timing coincided nicely with John Anthony's entry into the petite field with a line of coats and suits.

"A lot of people make budget- and moderate-price petites," Oppenheim said, "but we wanted to serve a fashion customer — a Madison Avenue customer. So it's been a matter of finding people who will make things for us."

Other labels spotted on the racks were Bill Haire ("His 2's work for us, but his 6's are too big," Oppenheim said), Christina von Lumbe, Jon Christoph, Brigitte Freed and Fenn, Wright & Manson.

A second Piaffe has just opened in Philadelphia, Oppenheim said, "because our stock is very urban-oriented so we wanted to try another urban market rather than the suburbs."

Another bit of good news for the petite woman — especially one who doesn't live near a store that sells clothes to fit her — is that a mail-order catalogue called Petite Lady will be coming out in January.

Checks ease kidney stone anxiety

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN.

I've had two attacks of kidney stones. I'm sure that anyone who has ever had one of these painful attacks will know how terrible it is. It's now eight months since I had my last attack. I dread the thought that it will happen again. Is there any way of preventing it?

Mr. D.S.

Dear Mr. S.:

Many people who have had one or more episodes of kidney stones react as you do. They live in fear that another attack is imminent. The fear of an attack can be just as devitalizing as an attack itself.

A kidney stone is composed of one or more chemicals. Calcium, phosphate, uric acid and magnesium are a few of the elements that may be deposited anywhere along the urinary tract. The ureter is a tiny tube which carries urine from the kidney to the bladder. When this is obstructed by a stone, the ureter becomes distended and painful. Since there are so many different causes of kidney stones, a concentrated effort must be made to track down the basic cause in an effort to avoid future atacks.

One of the major reasons for these stones is faulty metabolism (breakdown of food). With people who have gout, the uric acid content of the blood becomes high and uric acid kidney stones may be formed.

Abnormalities of calcium metabolism is another reason for stone deposits. A very small hormone-producing gland, the parathyroid, lies deep in the thyroid gland. This little gland controls the calcium balance in the body.

Many cases of kidney stones have been found in people who take unusually large doses of vitamin D. Infections of the kidneys and the urinary bladder are common causes of kidney stones.

Unfortunately, many sufferers of kidney stones go through a commonly described sequence of events. During the acute attack, very little investigation can be done. When the attack is over, patients are usually so relieved that they tend to become careless and do not immediately proceed, as they should, to explore the initial cause for their condition.

There are now many excellent methods by which the entire urinary tract can be studied. Special dyes and X-rays (intravenous pyelograms), and chemical studies, often reveal the basic reasons for the deposit of kidney stones.

If you actively pursue finding the cause, you will find, happily, that your anxiety level will be altered.

Speaking of your health: Do not allow a petty, unexpressed misunderstanding destroy your relationship with your doctor.

Britain won't buy hoopla over mini

By PHYLLIS FELDKAMP
Christian Science Monitor

LONDON — Although Paris is agog over the born-again mini, in Britain, the mini's motherland, designers are not having any, thank you.

Few new fashion collections include supershort skirts. Designers who hiked up hemlines at recent openings here could be counted on the fingers of one hand. Paul Howie, whose color-bright clothes are geared toward the super-active young, and Zandra Rhodes, of the highly charged high-fashion imagination, were the notable dissenters. Otherwise, London's vote was to keep skirts down — if not far below the knee, at least covering the kneecap by an inch or two, a hemline spoken of hereabouts as "the commercial length."

However cautious designers are about elevating the hemline, the English nevertheless may look forward to a leggy spring and summer season. Juliet Dunn's ultra-skimpy playsuits and many other designers' shorts and high side-slit skirts are assurances of that prospect.

Besides a leg interest, advance British styles touch base with many going trends in international fashion.

Cowboy looks in fringed leathers, Chinese influences, color splits, geometrics and asymmetrics, sawtooth edges, deep cowl drapery and a good deal of black and white all surfaced in the course of individual presentations and exhibits at hotels along Park Lane.

Noted, too, were jumpsuits in every conceivable fabric, abstract-patterned handknits in pastels and the wild colors now in vogue, as well as a selection of soft dresses that is more diversified as to style than in other fashion markets. Like the jumpsuits, the dresses tend to have European shoulders amplified by padding, no matter what the fabric may be.

Shoulders at Jean Muir, whose control and restraint always are admirable, are strengthened with stitched epaulets or puffed sleeves even when she is dealing with soft suede. Her models wore pigtails and Chinese mandarin caps and many of Muir's coats and dresses have the high Chinese collar.

The full-sleeved jacket with fitted waist and tiny peplum she initiated last season is continued in suedes of such high intensity colors as magnet, turquoise or periwinkle. Leathers sometimes are painted with gold pin dots or with her signature. The letters of her name are scrambled and scattered over the surface of the garment.

Evening glitter is equally discreet, tending to be a sprinkling of minuscule paillettes over a long jersey T dress.

"Zandra understands that not all women will want to wear the mini," Ann Knight, the designer's business associate, told small groups invited to view the Rhodes collection at her Grafton Street boutique. "So all of her short dresses can be ordered in knee length."

One-piece garment 'by 1993'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Clothing that automatically air conditions the wearer is one forecast about how we will dress in the 21st century.

"North Americans will be wearing one-piece molded garments by 1993," said this forecast in which more than 200 industrial firms and government and private researchers participated. "Non-woven textiles will serve as building materials two years later.

"And by the year 2006 fibers and fabrics will respond to temperature changes by opening or closing."

The futurists see widespread use also, by 1990, of man-made "cotton" with identical properties.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

My friend and I are in the same situation. We're both going to be 18 next month and we have never been on a date with a guy — not even to a school dance, let alone a movie. Are we abnormal? We consider ourselves only slightly overweight (5 lbs.) which we constantly try to lose. We have a few male friends, no "boyfriends." What's wrong? We would like to start going out on dates, but it is not foremost in our minds. (Don't say we try too hard!)

Answer: I can imagine that you would like to have a boyfriend very badly. We all would like to have someone that was special to us, and that we were special to. Now that you know that being overweight is not the problem, you may need to think about how you are with people. What do you like about other people? Do you try to let the people you know that you are genuinely interested in them and would like to know about them? Enthusiasm about your own interests and activities would help also. If you have tried all this, then you may want to consider talking with a consellor at a youth agency so that you can explore in more depth what might be interfering with you attempts to form a caring relationship.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I'm thinking very seriously about this guy whom I've known for two years. One time we used to be very close and I didn't mind telling him how much I loved him. And he didn't mind telling me, either. But ever since March, he hasn't called or even talked to me. When I talked to him, he just stopped to listen, but now he turns his back. At school he plays with the other girls and always make sure that I'm watching. I respect his opnion and I think of him all the time. Please explain this sudden change. What should I do?

Answer: I'm sure that you realize that I can't explain this sudden change in his behavior. One would have to not only know a person, but also to be aware of what's been going on his or her mind. What I can tell you is that this type of impulsive, unpredictable behavior is more common among adolescents and youth. He not only changed his mind about you, but he is obviously trying to make you "pay" for some real or imagined misdeed, or for his own guilt over his erratic behavior. At times a radical change in behavior like this has little or no relationship to the real cause.

You have few choices before you. It is degrading to you (and depressing) for you to continue fawning over this guy, who doesn't seem to be aware (or care about) the pain he is inflicting. It is time to develop new relationships with other guys, and put him out of your mind. Unfortunately, and paradoxically, he may be attracted to you once he realizes that you don't need him. And you don't.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I recently heard that you cannot get pregnant the first time you have sexual intercourse. Is this true?

Answer: I do not know how this rumor started but a lot of people seem to believe it. It is utterly and absolutely false.

Pregnancy is not a disease that can be caught through frequent exposure. It takes only one sperm to fertilize the egg and this can result from intercourse the first time. But pregnancy requires both an egg and sperm. While sperm are present in the semen which is ejaculated by the man every time he has intercourse, the egg is present only for a few hours each month or each cycle.

Ovulation is the name given to the process by which the egg matures and leaves the ovary. This process is repeated during each cycle and occurs approximately mid cycle when a woman menstruates every 28 days.

The egg survives for less than a day once it matures and leaves the ovary.

Because of the short life of the egg, there may be a number of occasions on which a couple have intercourse and no pregnancy results. But rather than take chances, it is better to use some means of contraception every time a couple have intercourse.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

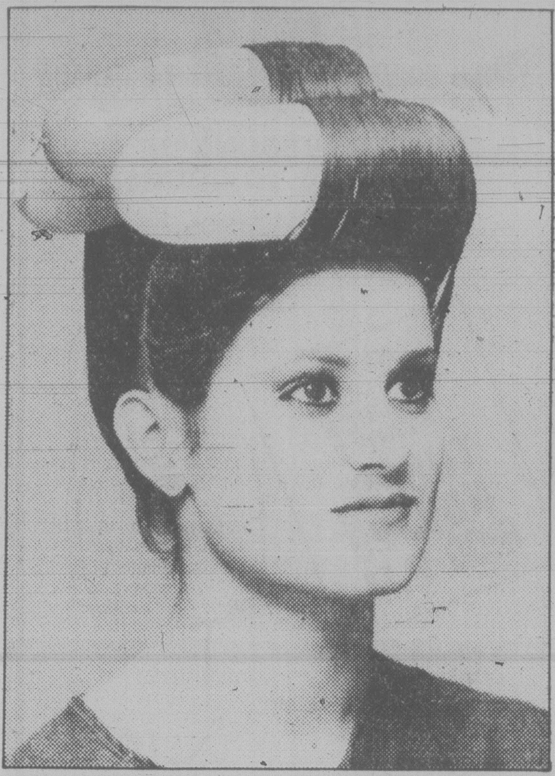
Hats of hair



CIRCULAR HAIR of model Julia Schmidt came about at three-hour London, Ont. demonstration with use of balloons for setting hair. Balloons are later broken, leaving three circular holes in the hair.

Hair is hair and hats are hats and the only time the two should mix is when one is on top of the other, right?

No, say the Mascolio Brothers who have hair salons in England and Rome.

With a bit of wire, a good amount of oozy hair gel and more patience than most people are blessed with, the team turned a head of hair into a brimmed hat slightly tilted over one eye at a recent show.

In addition to hats, there were several types of braids and plaits, twists and rolls and a lot of styles that looked like they might have been in the minds of hairdressers working in erly Greta Garbo movies.

The team which included Pat Strokes and Alan Doyle was brought to Canada by the Wella Corp. of Canada Ltd. and Unique Beauty Agencies.

Mascolo said the styles are innovative and described them as "so weird that they're not weird anymore. They're really just one step beyond doing hair styles, I guess."

Fashion show nets $700

The event, held at the Uplands Golf Club, featured fashions from Eatons, hairstylings by Lorraine's Beauty Salon and floral arrangements by Island Florists.

Norma Fitzsimmons, show commentator, said some 160 people attended the event. She said proceeds will go to such Zonta beneficiaries as Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific and Transition House, the home for battered wives.

"And on different occasions we focus on a specific project — such as for a piece of equipment for the heart unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital," said Fitzsimmons.

Fashions were suits, co-ordinates, ultra suedes and items for the festive season, she said.

Many of the floral arrangements — all with a Christmas theme — she said were made of silk rather than real blossoms.

When he graduates with honours, or makes a valiant effort to do so. When he turns 18 or 21—or 39 for the third time. When he becomes a bridegroom or a president…or just when some girl realizes what a remarkably fine fellow he is!

TORONTO (UPC) — The Conservative government will use tax incentives and training programs to create up to 119,000 jobs for young people by March, 1981, Employment and Immigration Minister Ron Atkey announced Monday.

Atkey also told 400 businessmen that the government would use immigration regulations to encourage those with special job skills to come to Canada.

Predicting a shortage of 14,000 skilled workers in Alberta in the 1980s, Atkey said those jobs could be filled by immigrants who have "skill and education not available among Canadians."

Better training and industrial apprenticeship programs could also be used to develop needed skills, he said.

"We must re-orient immigration to give greater opportunity to independent immigrants" not normally permitted to enter Canada, Atkey told reporters following a speech to the Canadian Club.

"Canadians will not perform" certain jobs, some of them in the needle trades, agriculture and construction, he said.

Details of a tax incentive program to create 105,000 jobs for the 15-to-24 age group would be provided in the Dec. 11 federal budget, Atkey said.

He said a new Youth Employment Secretariat, to be created by next spring, would coordinate the government's job strategies, including programs for "people who are hard to employ and (whose) only alternative is unemployment insurance."

The secretariat would organize a youth training program for unemployables, Atkey said, and at least 120,000 positions would be opened to youths being trained to develop "new skills demanded by industry."

A National Youth Service Corps, also under the secretariat, would provide 14,000 jobs for the same age group in environmental and recreation sectors to "establish facilities to serve needs of communities."

When asked how his proposals differed from the previous Liberal government's job corps, Atkey said participants would work for a year at minimum wages and create some "service of lasting benefit."

The second difference was that the plan was not for middle-class unemployed youths looking to "coast along" for a year, but for chronically-unemployed people.

Atkey said the tax incentive scheme would cost the federal government only $4,500 per job, compared with the cost under Liberal programs of $10,000 per job.

"We sense there's a willingness on the part of business, if it's a fair incentive which will be generous and attractive enough, to create jobs," Atkey told reporters.

He said the government was faced with two factors increasing the size of the labor force: the growing participation of women, "which is not in any way a temporary phenomenon" and the baby boom generation of workers.

Atkey said that 10 years ago, two in five Canadians were working, but by the end of the 1980s, "we face the prospect of almost half of our population being involved in the labor market."

Tanker carried base for TNT

TORONTO (CP) — The tanker car believed responsible for the CP Rail train derailment in nearby Mississauga was carrying the industrial solvent toluene, a raw material for TNT, says a member of the Canadian transport commission.

Commissioner R. M. March, head of a committee dealing with the movement of dangerous commodities, said in an interview Monday that he was surprised to learn that a car carrying toluene would have ordinary friction bearings which are susceptible to hot boxes — a term used by rail officials to describe wheel bearings that overheat.

CP Rail officials have said the derailment occurred when a car lost its wheels after a wheel bearing overheated. However, the type of car and its contents were not divulged.

Roller bearings, considered the answer to the hot box problem, are installed on all new freight cars. March said commission regulations also require them on all cars carrying liquid propane and they are found on 40 to 50 per cent of all Canadian railcars.

The commissioner said no changes have been made as yet in regulations on movement of dangerous commodities.

He said his committee has rejected two proposals aimed at reducing the likelihood of another such accident.

Oil crisis 'cannibalizes' economy

MONTREAL (CP) — Energy is gobbling a growing share of wealth and "cannibalizing" the economic system it is supposed to be serving, American ecologist and author Barry Commoner told a United Nations conference on long-term energy resources.

Non-renewable resources such as oil are bound to keep getting more expensive, and that makes solar energy look better than ever in the long run, Commoner said at the conference's opening session Monday.

But the conversion to solar energy will take a long time and it will be costly. Natural gas is the best transitional fuel as the world moves away from its dependence on oil, he said.

One way to ease the transition is to build small local co-generating plants using natural gas to produce both electricity and heat. Later, solar heating techniques could gradually replace gas for part of the plant's energy requirements.

The energy crisis is fundamentally an economic crisis, he said. Energy from non-renewable sources "will, in effect, cannibalize the economic system which it is supposed to support. . . . Solar energy can restore the vitality of the world economic system."

Other speakers Monday talked about how to determine the extents to which energy production should be decentralized to small units and how to decide on government subsidies for energy development.

Milton Russell, director of the energy policy section of the Resources for the Future institute in Washington, pointed to numerous arguments in favor of subsidies to encourage development of national supplies — smaller import bills, stability of supply, employment possibilities and regional development.

But he warned that subsidies should not get in the way of scrapping projects that don't work out and should be regulated to encourage efficiency. He also warned against allowing partisans of any one energy form, such as nuclear power, to make policy decisions.

Maurice Strong, conference co-chairman and former chairman of Petro-Canada, told the conference that nearly all Canadian energy research funds went into nuclear power until recently because a powerful nuclear establishment had the government in its grip.

Showdown coming over head of CLC

TORONTO (CP) — The second call in two months for the resignation of Dennis McDermott, the country's most powerful labor leader, is expected to prompt a showdown among union members at the four-day Ontario Federation of Labor convention opening today.

It is a continuation of a controversy in the labor movement over whether McDermott, president of the 2.3 million-member Canadian Labor Congress, has properly stood up for the troubled Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Federation president Cliff Pilkey told reporters Monday he is confident the majority of delegates representing some 800,000 union members in Ontario will reject calls for McDermott's resignation and at the same time declare support for the postal workers.

Some 1,000 delegates to a convention of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing about 257,000 workers, backed a dump-McDermott policy at a convention last month in Quebec City.

Echoing remarks McDermott made publicly in the wake of that convention, Pilkey said the dump-McDermott movement is led by Marxist-Leninist radicals.

"They are a fairly influential force though they're small in number," Pilkey said at a news conference.

"We're going to have to deal with them in terms of exposing them for what they are. It would be my view they would get little or no support from the delegates to the OFL convention."

Six policy resolutions on the postal workers have been proposed. Two of them, one from the Letter Carriers Union of Canada local in Toronto and another from the postal workers local in London, Ont., seek McDermott's resignation.

A support-McDermott resolution is proposed by the Public Service Alliance of Canada, representing federal government employees. The other three steer clear of McDermott's name but call for a show of solidarity with the postal workers and condemn the government for its treatment of them.

CP claimants waiting in lines

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Angry Mississauga residents, some waiting more than six hours Monday to claim out-of-pocket expenses from CP Rail, said they were being treated no better than cattle.

One elderly man collapsed in the line and was taken to hospital by ambulance but Peel Regional Police said he was treated and released two hours later.

The man was among hundreds who continue to besiege the CP Rail claim office for expenses incurred during the six-day evacuation which followed the Nov. 10 train derailment and explosion.

"I guess this is regular CP Rail service — herding us all like cattle," said George St. Michel, who waited more than six hours to claim $520.

"Just a little planning and organization could have gone a long way towards making the claims office operation better," said Judy Seltzer, a single parent who is claiming $600.

CP Rail spokesmen Gerry Lafontaine said the company had processed more than 3,000 claims involving more than 5,000 individuals by last Thursday.

He said average claims for out-of-pocket expenses relating to food and accommodation are between $200 and $300.

Gov't moves to curb leak probe practices

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark said Monday his government is drawing up new guides to set out police involvement in the investigation of leaked government documents.

Clark told the Commons that guides which prompted the RCMP to raid the home of a freelance journalist in Ottawa were neither endorsed by the current Conservative government nor the previous Liberal administration.

He said later in an interview it is too soon to say whether the new guides will protect journalists or members of Parliament from disclosing their sources.

The issue was raised in the Commons by Terry Sargeant (NDP — Selkirk-Interlake), who asked Clark to table the previous guides and to state whether they allowed the search.

The home of Jo Ann Gosselin was raided Nov. 8 after she refused to give two RCMP officers the defence department documents she used to write stories on negotiations between the government and two companies for a $2.5-billion fighter contract.

Lalonde declines leadership

LONDON, Ont. (UPC) — Marc Lalonde, cabinet minister in the former Liberal administration and a close friend of Pierre Trudeau's, said Monday he would not seek his former boss' job.

"I have served under three prime ministers ... and I know what the job of prime minister is," Lalonde told reporters. "I concluded many years ago that this is not the type of job for me, thank you very much."

The problem of insufficient entries to a hand can occasionally be solved by careful manipulation of the cards. In this deal, for example, South can make all 13 tricks if he plays properly. This may not seem to be a vital matter, since the contract is only three notrump, but anyone capable of making all the tricks with this layout can be said to be very well versed in the art of manufacturing entries.

West leads a heart and South sees there are two spade finesses to be taken, and diamond and club finesses as well. The difficulty is that there are four finesses to take, but only two apparent entries to dummy for the purpose. However, all the finesses can be accomplished by making judicious use of the low cards.

South wins the heart and plays the club seven to the ace. He then returns a low club to the jack and cashes the king. As a result, his carefully preserved four of clubs becomes an entry to dummy's five.

Declarer performs a similar feat in diamonds. He leads the eight to the king, finesses the jack on the return, and cashes the ace. The six is now an entry to dummy's seven.

South utilizes these synthetic entries to take two spade finesses. He crosses to the five of clubs for one of them, and to the seven of diamonds for the other one. His work done, he then claims 13 tricks.

It will be observed that declarer can easily spare the seven of clubs and eight of diamonds as he leads each of these cards to dummy. They are not significant as high cards, but they serve as unblocking devices for extra entries.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You expend horizons if efforts rest on solid structure. Obtain facts concerning basic values. Be aware of property rights, long-term potential. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals figure prominently. You are due to resolve dilemma.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message for valid hint. Accent on short trips, unique reports, and relative who talks much about diet but can't seem to lose weight. Key for your success now is diversification. Revise, review, tear down for purpose of reconstruction.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ideas can be transformed into viable concepts. Accent on valuables, pride of ownership and financial gain. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario. Progress aided through written word; you could locate "missing link."

IF NOVEMBER 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, independent, a unique personality; members of opposite sex tend to "spoil" you. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You have ability to sense pulse of public. When you follow your own instincts, you win. When you follow the crowd, your potential is diluted. You'll be happier in December. You'll travel, communicate and establish a constructive relationship. May will be your most significant month of 1980. You are due to be rid of emotional burden—there will be cause for celebration. You will recover from loss suffered this past summer.

Tax dodgers yield $170M

OTTAWA (CP) — The tax department is getting tough with persons and companies owing several years' income tax and expects to recover about $170 million in the fiscal year ending March 31.

Revenue Canada says it could bring in another $200 million in 1981, partly because of a new project launched this year to uncover those who have not reported their income for at least five years.

So-called "non-filers" — in one case 20 years in arrears — are mostly self-employed professionals and trades people and "marginal" incorporated firms, says the department. Unlike company-employed workers, self-employed individuals do not have their income tax deducted automatically at source. They "voluntarily" report their income.

Revenue officials, delighted by the results of their first full year of going after those missing from the tax rolls, say "it's a very profitable endeavor."

The department always chases taxpayers already on the rolls but who have filed late — about 250,000 in 1978-79 — including a "hard-core" group at least two years behind on payments.

However, by assigning specially-trained auditor and accounting investigators, instead of clerks, the department found another 21,000 in 1978-79.

The beefed-up nationwide investigation staff, which will triple to 138 in 1980-81, was prompted by the success of the Montreal office which, with only six persons, uncovered $2.4 million in 1975 from "non-filers."

The department, using "trial and error" methods to pick up missing taxpayers, looks at suspected professions and trades as well as cross-checking returns from those who do file. On other occasions, the department checks municipal tax-rolls to gather potential taxpayers.

For instance, 84 per cent of non-filers in the Hamilton area were self-employed, mostly subcontractors, while doctors, dentists, lawyers and engineers dominated the self-employed "non-filers" in Montreal. In London, Ont., 40 per cent were farmers and 40 per cent were commissioned sales persons.

No SIN to cash in coupons

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will introduce an amendment to the income tax act doing away with the requirement that those cashing Canada savings bond coupons must provide a social insurance number or pay a 25-per-cent withholding tax.

A statement issued jointly Monday by Finance Minister John Crosbie and Revenue Minister Walter Baker said the provision, introduced three years ago for income-tax administration and which applied chiefly to those cashing Canada savings bonds, is an improper use of the number.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Outfall proposal on Salt Spring draws heavy fire from residents

By PAUL MINVIELLE

GANGES — A Pollution Control Branch permit allowing a sewer outfall into Ganges harbor came under heavy fire here Monday night at a public hearing called by the Pollution Control Board.

About 350 islanders crowded Salt Spring Elementary School gymnasium for almost four hours to hear three of the five main appellants protest the issuance of the permit to the Capital Regional District. The meeting continues today.

The sewer proposal for Ganges has been a divisive issue on this island of 7,100 residents for years. A similar permit issued five years ago that would have allowed the pumping of untreated sewage into the harbor was revoked by the control board after a hearing similar to the one held Monday night.

The difference in the new proposal, with a projected price tag of $2.7 million, is that the sewage would receive secondary treatment.

Board chairman Dr. C.J.G. Mackenzie's early observation that "the board's proceedings are informal but, I hope, orderly," proved fairly accurate.

But his suggestion that he would try to keep the meeting focused on the issue of pollution fell apart about half-way through when he allowed CRD lawyer Louis Lindholm to berate Yvette Valcourt, one of the appellants against the permit and the Salt Spring CRD representative-elect.

Lindholm zeroed in on a newspaper report of a visit made by Valcourt and her husband, Phil Valcourt, to the office of the Driftwood, a weekly published on the island.

Lindholm was apparently trying to determine why the Valcourts were protesting being labelled as the chief opponents of the sewer.

In addition to Valcourt, the board heard from Betty Delmonico, a B.C. Ferries employee and island resident who has been one of the principal opponents of any proposal that would involve dumping effluent in the harbor; and from Pat Tiernan, a former Richmond alderman whose present home is on the Ganges Harbor shoreline.

Delmonico read a two-page submission that drew heavily from various federal government reports, particularly from the Fisheries and Marine Service of Department of Fisheries.

She said that herring are having a difficult enough time, with an early mortality rate of 99.5 per cent.

She contended that five present sources of pollution are known and they should be forced to clean up their own sewage, rather than putting all of Ganges on a sewer system.

"Surely it should be possible to clear up the harbor now and to dispose of the sewage of Ganges on the land as is done in the greater part of Canada," she said.

John Elliott of the Pacific Gillnetters Association, allowed to attach his comments to Delmonico's appeal, asked why, if the treated effluent is as harmless as has been claimed by the CRD, it has to be discharged 6,000 feet out from the shoreline.

"If it's perfectly harmless, it could be put to better use," Elliott said. "And why (would it be released) only on an out-tide if it's so harmless?"

Using a study on the harbor commissoned by the CRD, Pat Tiernan cited several places in the report to support his contention the sewage, should it ever be collected in a system, be dumped in Trincomali Channel on the northeast flank of the island or into Sansum Narrows on the southwest side, where rapid tidal action would disperse any effluent.

In an emotional appeal to the board, L.A. Lang, a retired resident who lives on the Ganges Harbor shoreline, asked why, when millions of dollars are being spent all around the world to clean up pollution, the CRD was proposing to dump sewage "into the delicate waters of Ganges Harbor?"

He said that around 1932 San Francisco installed what was then considered to be the ultimate in sewage disposal systems.

He said the authorities in the San Francisco Bay area have shut the system down, saying that if one more gallon of effluent is pumped into the bay, it will become a sewage lagoon.

To undo what was done years ago, the city is now facing a $2 billion project to dump sewage five miles offshore.

Alan Best said he has a "very personal interest" in the sewer outfall. He lives on Goat Island, which is right in the path of the outfall.

He said he's been observing the harbor since 1919, and he described it as "an almost non-moving piece of water, almost like a lagoon."

Weeds protect soil

Conditions vary from garden to garden. Cultural practices which are successful when used by one gardener often fail to produce the same results in a garden a block or two away.

There are certain basic principles which apply to all gardening. To ignore them is to create unnecessary problems. Beyond that point each home gardener has to adapt the advice of others, or that suggested in the written word, experimenting constantly and accepting or rejecting according to the results.

These thoughts came to mind while plying the hoe to the mass of weeds seedlings which have sprouted in the past four weeks of mild temperatures and the occasional shower.

As mentioned frequently in this column, small weeds in November are large weeds before the end of winter. A half hour with the hoe at this time of year can save hours of weed removal before the soil can be used in spring.

This I have proven to be true, but as I worked, it occured to me that many of the weeds being destroyed could reasonably give some protection to the crowns of plants when Arctic air makes a brief visit to coastal areas.

The work was being done between rows of daylilies recently divided and transplanted to grow on. The older leaves were massed on the soil and it was time consuming to lift the leaves of each plant for hoeing close to, and between, fifty plants.

There is little likelihood the weeds among the drooping leaves will develop to a size similar to the same weeds in the open, and there is also the possibility the weeds will keep the foliage of the plants in a position that will give protection to the young crowns.

Later, the same condition was found around the red-hot pokers and pampas grass, and other plants with long strap leaves, also herbaceous perennials which need the protection of dry leaves or conifer boughs over their crowns. Why destroy this natural cover and later spend time searching for boughs in the woods and putting them in place over the plants?

We have been thoroughly brainwashed into believing weeds are an indication of a slovenly gardener, and that weeds will rob our plants of needed nutrients, yet modern science is telling us that deep rooted weeds bring to the surface nutrients our cultivated plants must have and cannot reach with their own roots.

Clean cultivation has become a status symbol among gardeners, although we know that a covering of weeds is nature's way of protecting the soil, protecting the crowns and roots of plants, and preventing nutrients from leaching.

I have already found that chickweed around carrots results in a perfect crop untouched by the carrot rust-fly, and a good protection from frost for early sown peas. Now I am interested in the possibility of weeds as a winter cover.

It has been noticeable in past winters with extremely low temperatures that the so-called unkempt gardens, gardens where feeding of plants was never done, where summer and fall watering was neglected, were the gardens which received a minimal amount of damage to plants; while the "well-kept" gardens suffered severe losses.

More teachers motion passes

A proposal to add eight English teachers to the 1980 budget in School District 61 was adopted in principle by trustees Monday.

Acceptance of a motion by Trustee Martin Levin does not commit the board to hiring the teachers, a matter which will be debated by the incoming board in January when final budget estimates are presented.

Levin's motion was based on the concern for improving written standards of expression in the district. He said the eight English teachers should be assigned to schools to permit a controlled experiment to take place.

This would be up to the superintendent of schools to determine, but it could take the form of dividing a number of large classes so that smaller groups could be given closer attention in writing assignments.

The experiment would then be evaluated, Levin suggested. He was supported by a 5-4 vote.

Results would then allow the board to determine whether reduction in class size improves quality of learning and raises the standard of excellence, he said.

E&N group lacks cash

The E&N Railway steering committee wants to present a brief to the national inquiry on rail safety about unsafe conditions on the Vancouver Island line.

But there's a problem — it has no money to attend the hearings if they are confined to eastern Canada.

Chairman John Cooper said today he hopes the railway transport inquiry would hold sittings in the west, especially Vancouver Island because the committee is out of money as of this week.

He said the committee wants the opportunity to describe conditions on the rail line.

The national inquiry into rail safety stems from a massive derailment at Mississauga, Ont., which piled up tankers loaded with propane and chlorine and forced a total evacuation of the city.

Cooper said the E&N line is inadequate to handle propane tankers weighing 250,000 pounds, about four times the weight of loaded boxcars it was designed to serve.

"We are amazed that there are no statutory minimum standards of maintenance in Canada," Cooper told the Canadian Transport Commission in a letter last April.

Cooper said in his letter there was no validity to the argument that the E&N should get less attention because it carries less traffic than the mainline.

It is owned by CP Rail and carries the same kind of traffic, Cooper said.

Cooper said he does not know whether it included the Port Alberni branch where three of the four derailments since early October have occurred.

On Monday two empty cars derailed near Arrowsmith on the Alberni branch. On Oct. 6 five cars went off the rails near the same spot and at the beginning of November, a log train tore up nearly a quarter mile of track north of Duncan.

The Sunshine Coast Regional District will hold a public inquiry to examine the need for a 500,000-volt transmission line B.C. Hydro wants to string across the northern part of the Sechelt Peninsula.

If installed, the Cheekeye-Dunsmuir line would run from the Sechelt to north of Qualicum Beach.

The district is asking the public for questions relating to the Hydro project to add to its own list of queries.

The Sunshine Region board met two weeks ago, and after reviewing all the evidence, repeated it is unanimously opposed to the proposed route of the line.

Those invited to the hearing — the date has not yet been set — include Hydro chairman Robert Bonner, B.C. Energy Commission chairman Norm Gish, Energy Minister Bob McClelland, Environment Minister Stephen Rogers and Bain Vance of the pesticide control branch.

Nicholson has also invited Vancouver Island residents to submit questions or to participate directly in the hearing.

He said the board does not intend to deny needed power to island residents but is acting to protect the Sechelt against social, environmental and economic impacts.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Thousands of U.S. ground troops in Vietnam may have been exposed to the controversial herbicide Agent Orange, far more than the defence department previously has admitted, the General Accounting Office (GAO) has reported.

The GAO study, which concerned only the northern one-fifth of what used to be ~~South~~ Vietnam, found that the Pentagon was "inaccurate" in saying no U.S. troops were in the sprayed areas until at least four weeks had passed and the herbicide had decomposed.

In fact, the GAO told Sen. Charles H. Percy (Rep.—Ill.), who requested the report, at least 5,900 Marines were within a third of a mile of sprayed areas during and just after defoliation missions were flown.

Another 16,000 Marines were stationed within a third of a mile of sprayed areas before the four weeks had elapsed, the report said. The study concluded: "The chances that ground troops were exposed to herbicide Orange are higher than DOD (the defence department) previously acknowledged."

Agent Orange was the most widely used of several defoliants with similar color-coded names that were sprayed to kill crops and expose jungle sanctuaries in Vietnam.

"DOD considered herbicide Orange to be a low health hazard and took few precautions to prevent troops' exposure to it," the GAO study said.

More than 10.5 million gallons of Agent Orange were sprayed on five million acres between 1965 and 1970. Its use was ended afer South Vietnamese newspapers began reporting large numbers of stillborn and defective babies in sprayed areas.

The herbicide contains a toxic chemical contaminant known as dioxin and has been blamed for causing cancer, skin disease, impotence and hormonal disorder among those who served in Vietnam. But the Pentagon and Dow Chemical Co., which made most of the agent Orange, insist no scientific proof links the herbicides to any known disease.

The GAO reported that, as of Sept. 30, about 4,800 former Vietnam servicemen had asked the Veterans' Administration for treatment of what they said were health problems related to contact with Agent Orange. Of those, 750 submitted compensation claims.

So far, only two men have received benefits, both for a skin condition called chloracne, which can occur from other causes. In no case has an illness been attributed directly to the herbicide Orange.

Percy said the GAO probe found that one former Marine who said he had been disabled by Agent Orange had in fact been directly in the path of two spraying missions..

While Marine Corps records enabled the GAO to locate troops precisely on the days of the sprayings, Army records were not nearly as helpful. An estimated 10 of 13 Army units in the area of Vietnam surveyed, designated at that time as I Corps, were in "close proximity" to the sprayings, the study said.

Percy asked Defence Secretary Harold Brown to identify all former Marines who might have been exposed and to advertise widely to reach similarly involved Army veterans who also may have been exposed, so that all might be examined.

Percy has co-sponsored legislation to require a conclusive study by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of Agent Orange's effects.

Canal to water Sinai

Times News Services

CAIRO — President Anwar Sadat today laid the foundation stone for a new irrigation canal that will carry surplus water from the Nile Delta to Sinai.

The five-year project will involve putting a huge tank under the bed of the Suez Canal to siphon water into the arid peninsula now being evacuated by Israel.

The irrigation canal will be 50.5 miles long, starting from the Damietta (eastern) branch of the Nile and cutting across the delta all the way to the Suez Canal.

Officials said the project will cost $224 million.

Officials said the irrigation canal will divert to Sinai daily several million cubic meters of water which now spill into the Mediterranean without being utilized.

Meanwhile, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has announced that the U.S., Israel and Egypt are considering a multi-billion dollar irrogation project for the Sinai and Israel's Negev Desert.

Bergland said the U.S. and Israel would provide most of the technical know-how for the project. All three governments would pay some of the costs, but there would also be financing by private industry and possibly the World Bank.

Bergland said he discussed the plan with Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin during his recent Middle East trip.

Safe flight to Texas for health

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Former president Hector Campora, suffering from a cancerous tumor, flew out of Argentina today, ending 43 months spent under Mexican diplomatic protection.

Campora, 70, accompanied by his wife, two doctors and Mexico's chief of bilateral relations, boarded a plane of the state-run airline for Bogota, Colombia, where he will transfer for a flight to Mexico City.

Campora will probably go from Mexico to Houston, Texas, to receive treatment.

The Argentine government, basing its decision on recent confirmations of three-month-old medical reports that Campora has cancer, Monday granted the former Peronist leader safe passage out of Argentina.

SLA organizer out of hiding

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Robyn Sue Steiner says she was into drugs and rebellion when she met Russell Little, and together they organized the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Steiner fled to England in 1974 after a friend warned that she was on the SLA's death-list for deserting it.

Now she has emerged from hiding to provide details of life inside the group that made headlines around the world with the kidnapping of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

Authorities say Steiner's reappearance may be connected with Little's retrial in March for the 1973 murder of Marcus Foster, a school superintendent. Little and Joseph Remiro were convicted in 1975 of first-degree murder for the slaying of Foster, who was gunned down with cyanide-tipped bullets.

The convictions were later overturned on the grounds that the trial judge erred by asking jurors, who were orginally split in their decisions, to reconsider their verdict.

In a copyright story in the San Francisco Chronicle on Monday, Steiner said she met Little as a student at the University of Florida and told how they came to organize the SLA.

"When I first met Russ in 1971, we discussed revolution and I took part in rallies and demonstrations, but he'd been a gentle, idealistic person," she said. "It was after we arrived in California and began prison visits that he changed."

Steiner says they got involved with Venceremos, a radical group, when they arrived in the San Francisco Bay area.

There they met William Wolfe, a future member of the SLA, and learned to handle guns.

Steiner said the SLA moved toward terrorism largely under the guidance of ex-convict Donald DeFreeze, the mysterious "Field Marshal Cinque."

She said she kept the SLA afloat by bringing in up to $2,000 a week by stealing, forging and shoplifting. She also said she stole the cyanide applied to the bullets which felled Foster.

Steiner said DeFreeze kept a list of assassination victims, including former president Richard Nixon, Sen. Edward Kennedy, several bankers, politicians and other prominent people.

She said she returned to Florida a short time after the Foster killings but she could not escape the SLA. DeFreeze contacted her through her parents, telling her four days before the Hearst kidnapping that the SLA was about to pull "the biggest action since Foster."

Hearst, now married to a San Francisco police officer, was kidnapped Feb. 4, 1974. Later she joined her terrorist abductors and went underground until her capture Sept. 18, 1975. She was convicted of taking part in a bank robbery and served a short prison term.

U.S. branded threat to aviation industry

MANILA (AP) — The director-general of the International Air Transport Association attacked the United States today as a threat to a co-ordinated, smoothly functioning world aviation industry.

A report by Knut Hammarskjold on the state of the industry at the end of 1979 said that the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board was bucking almost every government and airline and even other U.S. government agencies by trying to "export its domestic deregulation experiment to the rest of the world."

Hammarskjold presented the report at the first working session of IATA's 35th annual general meeting, during which industry sources said the air policies of President Jimmy Carter are certain to come under constant attack.

Hammarskjold set in motion the anti-U.S. tenor of the policy in a ceremonial opening session by inserting the following denunciation in a message of thanks to the conference host, Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos:

"I believe it would be both tragic and ironical if the traditional pattern in IATA were to be disrupted by ill-advised unilateral action.

"I fear that such action, even if taken in the name of freedom and liberalism, may instead lead to polarization, fragmentation, isolationism and a retrograde retreat into a parochial mentality and ultimately to protectionism."

While insisting IATA is not a cartel, the association contends the nature of the industry requires a co-ordinated, multinational approach. It says its standardized fares and ticketing practices are responsible for one-ticket travel on several carriers.

Thieves toss loot away

DONCASTER (Reuter) — Two men on a motorcycle hurled bundles of banknotes into the street in this northern English town Monday in an apparent attempt to reduce the weight of mailbags they had stolen.

They were being chased by police after robbing a mail van.

Banknotes worth thousands of dollars were later recovered, but the robbers got away with an envelope containing $12,300, police said.

Researcher decries 2,4,5-T horror tales

PORTLAND (UPI) — An Oregon State University professor says the controversial herbicide 2,4,5-T is not dangerous.

Michael Newton, a professor of forest ecology, said a national study he participated in last year showed "one really cannot be exposed to significant amounts (of 2,4,4-T) unless one drinks it."

Newton, his wife, Jane, and two other researchers took part in the experiment last year on behalf of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Environmental Protection Agency and university agricultural experiment stations.

Newton said the four applied various solutions of the herbicide to one-foot-square cloths, put the soaked pieces of cloth on their thighs and placed pressure bandages over the cloths.

He said the experiment appoximated the type of exposure herbicide applicators would receive by spilling the chemical on their clothing or their skin.

"Ninety-eight percent of the 2,4,5-T was excreted through the urine within five days," Newton said. "The total amount passing through the body was less than one thousandth of the maximum safe dose."

Newton said the experiment proved "you could drink the water in streams coming out of a sprayed area or eat the venison from deer which have been sprayed and be safe."

He said he does not know why EPA suspended the registration for 2,4,5-T in light of the 900-page study.

New spy charges rock U.K.

LONDON (UPI) — A woman who reportedly worked as a secretary in Britain's counterespionage department for almost 30 years was charged Monday with attempting to pass secret information.

Pamela Elizabeth Lamble, 44, described as a student, made a brief appearance Monday at Bow Street magstrates court and was remanded for one week.

News of her arrest followed by only a week the bombshell announcement that Sir Anthony Blunt, the Queen's art curator, was a self-confessed Russian spy. He had worked during the war in MI5, the government's counterespionage department.

The Evening News reported that Miss Lamble had worked at MI5 since she was 16, retiring about a month ago. Scotland Yard would say only she worked until recently for a "government department."

Miss Lamble was charged under Section One of the Offical Secrets Act with "attempting to communicate information to another person which might be useful, directly or indirectly, to an enemy."

Her action allegedly took place last Thursday. She was arrested Saturday by Scotland Yard Special Branch officers who arrived at her home in Staines, Middlesex.

Blunt, meanwhile, may have had access to atom bomb secrets when he was spying for the Soviet Union during and just after the Second World War, British MP Neville Trotter said Monday.

And historian Andrew Boyle, whose book on spies resulted in the the government's decision last week to disclose Blunt's espionage activities, said the former art adviser may have helped British spy Klaus Fuchs, who passed on atomic bomb secrets to the Soviet Union.

Commenting during a joint television interview with Boyle, Trotter said Blunt "might even have had access to atom secrets."

Boyle's book, The Climate of Treason, said a titled man with links to the Queen was the so-called fourth man in an espionage scandal involving British diplomats Guy Burgess, Donald Maclean and Kim Philby.

Shortly after his book was published, Mrs. Thatcher disclosed to Parliament that Blunt, a former art adviser to the Queen, had confessed to espionage in 1964 in return for immunity from prosecution.

She said that "there is no doubt that British interests were seriously damaged by his activities," but she did not elaborate.

Fuchs worked at U.S. universities in the 1940s and later became department head of Britain's Harwell Nuclear Research Centre.

IRA bombers blitz Ulster

BELFAST (AP) — At least 21 bombs exploded in Belfast and other Northern Ireland centres Monday in what police described as co-ordinated attacks by Irish Republican Army terrorists.

An undetermined number of bombs were being defused by Royal Army bomb disposal teams. Police said five persons were wounded, one severely.

Most of the bombs exploded within a 45-minute period.

Police said two bombs exploded in a tire depot in the border town of Newry and started a major fire near a tanker truck carrying 2,000 pounds of highly inflamable liquid hydrogen.

The blitz came a week before the British government was scheduled to convene a Belfast conference of the province's four major political parties in a renewed effort to end a decade of civil strife.

Police said a bomb exploded in an office building in Lurgan, southwest of Belfast, as the area was being cleared, and wounded two men and a woman. One of the men was severely injured, they said.

A car bomb exploded in the centre of the garrison town of Omagh, west of Belfast, wounding two British soldiers and started a large fire, police added.

Armed men planted three bombs in Belfast's Chester Park Hotel, which exploded and started another major fire, the spokesman said.

Police said the guerrillas also planted bombs in two commuter trains in Belfast's Central Station. Officials had received telephone warnings and cleared both trains of passengers.

One bomb was taken off a train and exploded on a platform, police said. Army bomb disposal teams boarded the trains, both of which were stopped in the station, to defuse other devices, police said.

Muzorewa puts plan to Salisbury session

SALISBURY (UPI) — Prime Minister Bishop Abel Muzorewa summoned parliament into special session today to approve a British-proposed constitution leading to new general elections.

The prime minister urged passage of the constitution, then rammed through legislation allowing parliament to bypass a 30-day interim period between passage of the legislation and its implementatiom to give the constitution quick approval.

Debate on the constitution proposed by Britain was expected to open Wednesday, with passage anticipated on Friday, political sources said.

In a nationwide broadcast, the bishop Monday night called the constitution the best Britain has ever drawn up for a former colony, and attacked what he called "a few racists" opposed to its implementation.

The proposed constitution was worked out at the current London conference on Zimbabwe Rhodesia, which is also trying to reach an agreement on a cease-fire arrangement with the Patriotic Front guerrillas, that would precede the elections.

Muzorewa called the new constitution a victory for democracy over the forces of violence.

In an earlier news conference, former Rhodesian prime minister Ian Smith said his white Rhodesian Front would be willing to serve in a coalition with any of the black parties, including the Patriotic Front, that came to power in the coming election.

This posture reflected a greater flexibility than Smith has previously displayed and could enable the whites to retain some influence in the Cabinet even under the new constitution.

The whites, who make up only 3 per cent of Rhodesia's 6.7 million people, have reserved for them 20 of the 100 seats in Parliament. None of the four black parties contesting the other 80 is likely to gain the 51 seats needed to give them power without support from other parties.

Flood creates deadly crater

By United Press International

Torrential rains deluged the Eastern seaboard early today, touching off floods that washed out roads and left four persons dead and a number of others either missing or injured. Strong winds swept the Great Lakes and snow dusted the Plains.

Heavy rains washed out route 9N in New York's Essex County near Elizabethtown, N.Y. The Bouquet River, which runs along the road, surged over its banks and gouged a hole into the roadway between Elizabethtown and Keene, near Lake Placid.

Police said three cars plunged into the crater, described as between 100 and 200 feet long and about 25 feet deep, before the highway was closed.

One body was recovered from the water-filled hole. Three people were reported missing and were believed to have been swept into the river when the roadbed collapsed, authorities said.

Two other people were taken to Elizabethtown Community Hospital for treatment of bruises suffered when their car ran into the hole.

8 to stand trial in Park slaying

SEOUL (UPI) — Martial law prosecutors Monday indicted the former head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency (KCIA) and seven other Koreans in the assassination of President Park Chung-hee and said they will stand public trial.

If found guilty, at least seven could face a maximum penalty of death — hanging for the six civilians indicted and a firing squad execution for the military man accused in the conspiracy.

The martial law command announced today that former KCIA chief Kim Jae-kyuand and ex-presidential secretary Kim Kae-won were referred Monday to the Military Summary Court for public trial on charges of murder aiming at insurrection, for which the death sentence is mandatory.

Howls greet Thatcher plan

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Monday she will reintroduce the system of giving state honors to Britons who distinguish themselves in politics.

The practice of rewarding work in politics was stopped by former Labor prime minister Harold Wilson in 1966, reintroduced by Conservative Edward Heath, and stopped again by Wilson in 1974.

B.C. builders face shutdown

Hydro pickets could halt work by weekend

VANCOUVER (CP) — The province's construction industry will shut down if a labor dispute at B.C. Hydro is not settled by the end of the week, the president of the B.C. council of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada said Monday.

Home builders are facing increased expenses and construction delays of up to six weeks because Office and Technical Employees Union pickets are preventing Hydro crews from hooking up natural gas and electrical services to homes under construction, said Ernie Hnatiuk.

Builders, especially those in the B.C. interior, require heat to complete home interiors. Without gas or electricity hook ups they must rent propane heaters or convert gas heaters to propane, he said.

"We estimate rental of propane equipment, additional interest payments on loans financing projects, as well as taxes, supervision costs and expenses for homeowners unable to occupy their homes are costing apartment builders $24 per unit each day the strike continues."

Builders of single family homes are paying $39 per home each day in additional overhead costs, he said.

Propane equipment supplies are running out in the Greater Vancouver area and builders in the interior are able to keep on construction schedules only by paying heavily for temporary conversion of gas furnaces to propane, Hnatiuk said.

"We anticipate by the end of this week if the B.C. Hydro problem is not resolved, many builders will find additional unrecoverable costs intolerable and they will be forced to stop work.

"While some builders will be able to recover costs by passing additional expenses on to home buyers and renters, many contract builders are committed to fixed budgets and firm possession dates."

Meanwhile, the 3,700-member union has vowed to continue picketing and shut down Sea-Bus ferry service across Burrard Inlet again today.

Monday pickets halted the two passenger ferries which run between the city's North Shore and the main downtown business section after a breakdown in contract talks.

Union negotiators had agreed to take Hydro's latest contract offer to the membership — although they said they would recommend rejection — if the company ended a lockout affecting about 60 union members.

Committee chairman Fred de Moor said the union offered to stop all picketing in about a dozen cities while a ratification vote took place.

But B.C. Hydro spokesman Ron Monk said the company rejected the trade-off because it wants the union bargaining committee to recommend acceptance of the two-year contract, similar to that already negotiated with two other unions at the government-owned utility.

SANDBAG TRIAL: Armed police wearing bullet-proof jackets and protective masks peer out from behind a wall of sandbags outside the Lamarmora barracks in Turin, Italy, site of an appeal trial of members of the notorious Red Brigade. Extreme measures are being taken by police to assure safety of those involved in the trial which begins next week.

46% raise for Bonner

B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner has been given a 46-per-cent pay increase, boosting his annual salary to more than $10,000 above that of Premier Bill Bennett.

The raise, approved by cabinet shortly after last Friday's shuffle, brings Bonner's salary to $70,000 a year from $48,000, compared with Bennett's $59,500. The increase dates back to Oct. 1.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, the energy minister and man responsible for Hydro until the cabinet shuffle, defended the size of the increase Monday on grounds that no Hydro chairman has received a raise in six years.

The former NDP government decided in 1973 the position of Hydro chairman was worth $48,000 and there has not been an increase since then, Hewitt said.

The 46 per cent averaged over six years becomes an annual eight-per-cent increase, which is comparable to recent settlements won by trade unions, he said.

"When you consider B.C. Hydro is one of B.C.'s top employers and has responsibilities comparable to any other major corporation, it's my personal observation he's worth far more."

He said Bonner, 59, should have a salary closer to the $85,000 a year Robbie Sherrell, president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C, receives.

Hewitt said he did not think it was bad timing to announce the increase while Hydro was in the midst of a protracted labor dispute with its office workers, members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 378.

Hewitt said he had been working on the increase for some time, and it was coincidence that the paperwork was completed in time for the new cabinet to approve it after the swearing-in ceremony Friday.

But union spokesman Fred Trotter said Bonner's increase will not sit well with the members because some of them are striking now to get a wage offer of eight per cent in each year of a proposed two-year contract.

Trotter said because of deductions and the loss of the employees' bus pass, the increase will be more like five per cent in the second year.

Opposition hydro critic Chris D'Arcy (NDP — Rossland-Trail) said the increase is a hefty one, but it brings Bonner's salary closer to that paid senior executives in other crown corporations and in private industry.

He said he expected the chairman of a corporation with annual sales of $900 million would earn more than $70,000.

B.C. Hydro ended its 1978-79 fiscal year March 31 with a profit of $48.6 million on sales of $904 million. It had assets valued at $6 billion.

Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) said he thought the government boosted Bonner's salary so that it would equal the $62,500 pension he is entitled to receive from MacMillan Bloedel.

Before moving to Hydro, Bonner had been chairman of MacMillan Bloedel, earning $120,454 a year. He has said he will not accept the pension.

Boat flips off ledge, man dies

One man is dead and another in hospital after a 17-foot fibreglass boat overturned off Brotchie Ledge this morning.

Details of the incident are sketchy but a spokesman for the Canadian Armed Forces base at Esquimalt said the two men were fishing when their boat overturned shortly before 9 a.m.

The spokesman said two divers off the minesweeper Chignecto pulled one of the men from the water. The second was rescued by another pleasure craft in the area.

The Chignecto brought both men into Victoria Harbor where they were transferred by ambulance to Victoria General Hospital.

One of the men died and the other is listed in good condition recovering from exposure.

Landslide in Charlottes . . .warnings come true

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Eight landslides in a logged-over valley on the west coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands have threatened a major salmon spawning stream, says fisheries supervisor Kip Slater.

In Victoria, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said today the provincial government will investigate the report.

In March, a conflict between the federal fisheries department and the B.C. forest service over continued logging of the site resulted in the arrest of 16 loggers.

Charges laid under the Fisheries Act indicted loggers for endangering a fish habitat near Rennell Sound on Graham Island by increasing the risk of sedimentation in spawning areas.

The forests ministry argued there was no concrete proof that logging was affecting slope stability. The fisheries ministry backed down and accepted an end to logging on only a small portion of the permit.

Charges against the loggers and the logging company were dropped.

Slater said the fact that major slides came so soon after logging indicates that slope stability at Rennell Sound is much worse than anticipated.

Usually, he said, large failures do not occur until after root systems have rotted away, usually a period of three to four years.

Three of the slides are considered major, measuring up to 60 metres across and exposing bed rock in crevaces up to 15 metres deep.

Slater said a wall of mud has crossed a logging access road and moved into slash and standing timber near Riley Creek, a major pink salmon stream.

While it is not a pink salmon spawning year, Slater said that any other spawning in the creek likely has been lost due to heavy sedimentation. And he's not optimistic about future seasons.

Slope stability also has been questioned at several other proposed logging areas in Rennell Sound and fisheries officers are worried that Riley Creek could be eliminated from fish production completely.

"Now maybe the forest service will listen to us when we show them geographic surveys," Slater said. "We're not in the business of writing off salmon streams."

Jack Biickert, manager of the Prince Rupert forest region which includes the Queen Charlotte Islands, said the slope failures were the result of abnormal weather, heavy rainfall and high, almost hurricane-force winds.

Some 150 millimetres of rain (slighty more than six inches) fell on Rennell Sound in the 48 hours preceeding the slide.

Biickert said forest rangers are checking damage at the site. He declined to comment on the possible effects logging might have made on the slope's stability.

Meanwhile, MP Jim Fulton (NDP-Skeena), said he will call on Fisheries Minister James McGrath to pursue the charges against QC Timber that were dropped last spring.

Pakistan and Brazil racing toward N-bomb

Times News Services

Pakistan has acquired the materials and technology to make a hydrogen bomb and hopes to test its first thermonuclear device by April, a London newspaper, quoting a high-level military source in Islamabad, says.

And in Toronto, Maclean's magazine says Brazil and Argentina — traditional adversaries — have been teaming up on atomic weapons research and says Brazil can be expected to explode a nuclear device within the next year, possibly in six months.

The London Sunday Times said that with a desert hijacking in Africa and other secret operations on two other continents, Pakistan has managed to outpace the estimates of the United States and other nuclear powers who feared they would assemble a nuclear bomb in two or three years.

The newspaper said uranium was acquired from a truck that vanished after setting out from a French mining base three months ago and was later found empty.

The newspaper said signs point to two possible test explosion sites — in the Sind Desert and in the wasteland of South Baluchistan.

Maclean's, quoting diplomatic sources of the Washington-based Council on Hemispheric Affairs, a private think tank, says scientists from both countries are getting help and encouragement from South Africa to develop nuclear muscle.

It adds that Brazil is using weapons-grade plutonium — a nuclear byproduct — from reactors built for it by West Germans in 1975 under a $10-billion contract that almost went to Canada.

The German company that built the reactors, Kraftwerke Union, is the same firm that signed a contract recently to build reactors in Argentina — a contract Canada anxiously sought.

Maclean's says Canada missed the two reactor contracts because Canadian Candu reactors are built too safely to produce the grade of plutonium needed to make weapons, whereas the West German reactors will easily produce it.

About 30,000 welfare families will get a $50 Christmas bonus this year, double last year's award.

An additional 23,000 single welfare recipients will get a bonus of $20, up from last year's $15.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Monday the increase recognizes the effects of inflation as well as marking the Year of the Child and the Family.

Mrs. McCarthy also renewed her pledge to get as many people as possible off the welfare rolls and back into the work force.

Students booby-trap U.S. embassy

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Moslem students occupying the U.S. embassy in Tehran say they have planted explosives around the embassy compound to foil an alleged U.S. plan to free the 49 American hostages still held there.

"The embassy grounds, the walls and the buildings where the hostages are held are mined or wired with explosives," the students said in a communique broadcast over the official radio.

The students, who seized the embassy on Nov. 4, said U.S. agents plan a raid in the next few days during the period of Moslem mourning commemorating the death of the prophet Mohammed's grandson.

"Do not for any reason climb the walls," the students warned the public: "There is the danger of death at any moment and at any step."

Iran's unofficial leader, the Ayatollah Khomeini said today that nothing — including United Nations action — would prevent the remaining American hostages' being put on trial as "U.S. spies" unless the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi were extradited from the U.S. and returned to Iran to face charges for humanitarian crimes.

Khomeini insisted the shah's case must be investigated in Iran because all evidence against him was in Iran and could not be sent abroad:

"There are millions of witnesses, including over 100,000 people crippled (by the shah's regime), whose transfer outside Iran to report to the court is not possible."

In New York, a team of doctors headed by a Vancouver radiologist Dr. H. Joachin Burhenne of the University of British Columbia today removed the shah's remaining gallstone, but want to keep him under observation for "the next few days."

The successful removal of the gallstone was expected to be the last medical barrier to the shah's being able to travel, which would allow him to leave the U.S. if he chooses.

Khomeini rejected any action by the UN Security Council in Iran, declaring his Islamic regime could not accept the verdict of "any council or court formed under direct influence of the United States."

In Washington, President Carter told Democratic congressional leaders today U.S. honor is at stake in Tehran and reportedly indicated the United States would not quickly forgive Iran for holding Americans captive.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose Tuesday in a continued wave of Wall Street euphoria over an apparent end to the interest-rate spiral of the past four months.

Chase Manhattan Bank today sliced its prime lending rate to 15¼ from 15¾ per cent. Smaller banks matched that cut or followed Bankers Trust's lead Monday in dropping the prime to 15½ from 15¾ per cent.

Either way, it was the first cut in the prime rate since August, and analysts saw continued reductions in the key rate, which is charged by banks on loans to their best commercial customers. Experts say that a lessening of the rates will help business by cutting interest expenses. The Federal Reserve Board has been taking steps to boost interest rates in an effort to control the U.S. money supply.

Huntsman Fireplace Heater

BEAVER ENERGY SAVER

1) Unique tri-air draft controls lets you adjust primary and secondary air.
2) Firebox lining of high heat firebrick...will hold a slow-burning fire for hours.
3) All welded steel body radiates even heat.
4) Heated air must pas around the top plate, which extends to within a few inches of the back, and into an upper heat exchanger.
5) Interior flue extends to within a few inches of the front, forcing air to circulate within the chamber, retaining heat that would normally be quickly lost up the flue.
